y gratified with the prospects for a prosperous fall and winter as affecting the territory visited by him. Mr. Rust says the "panicky feeling" which was eginning to become manifest a few weeks ago has entirely disappeared and the Kansas farmer is full of confi dence as to his immediate future. Reports to the same effect are comins from many sources, reports of reviving cornfields, where full ears of corn will take the place of nubbins; dust heaps are becoming transformed into choice pastures and unheard of forage crop are coming up, to say nothing of the old cribs that have been found to be gorged with old corn that will be utiized to produce high priced beef steer for the coming winter and spring. The fat cattle market during the past week has been somewhat uneven but taking the entire time, there is little change in values. Monday's trading was done at prices about like those which prevailed at the close of the ceding week; on Tuesday and Wednes-day buyers feigned indifference and on the latter day succeeded in breaking prices 10c to 15c with scattering sales showing still greater declines. Most of the decline was regained on Thursday when fat cattle were quoted 3c to 10c The highest price for the week higher.

was realized on Tuesday when 5.75 was received for a string of 1233 lb cattle, but these cattle were 150 lbs lighter than the 5.90 and 6.00 lots of the previous week, so the difference in the top for the two weeks would hardly indicate shrinkage in values to that extent. Fluctuations in Southern cattle prices were slight though Thursday's market with over 2,000 in sight was unusually active with all early arrivals sold and weighed up before noon. Steers sold during the week largely at 3.25 to 3.75, though many light. 700 to 800 fb steers, sold under 3.00. The top on fed southerners for some months was realized on Tuesday, when a load of 18-months-old baby beeves were mar-keted by Mr. John McGrath of Stevens. . T., at 5.20. Mr. McGrath's consignment consisted of 27 steers and 2 helf ers that averaged 1989 lbs, after having been fed since weaning time on shelled corn and oats. Something over 12,000 stockers and feeders went into the country during week ended Aug. 21st, against 20, 600 for the previous week and, while recelpts were not large, there were nough for the demand and prices renit, a marvelous scene of beauty mained about stationary. Proctically the same thing may be said of the cow and helfer trade, some salesmen quoteye can reach to the south, wooded mountain ranges are seen. whom is a clergyman. Those of the public who may imagin that there is no room for initiative and ingenuity in the cats' meat trade are vastly mistaken. In Kensington an enterprising young fellow is said to be baking a fortune through the happy lea of supply, on request fish instead if meat for the cats on his round. The ets of the prosperous can obtain meat t almost any time, and they will not ok, for the most part, at the wares of the cats' meat man. But no he can the then it may, and a huge success is the esult of the innovation. Again, there ire certain purveyors who take troubl to obtain a close knowledge of every inimal on their rounds and is little peuliarities. acre and an annual rental of $2; the farmers to build and maintain their OWD car from there to their property. This was not deemed practicable by the citizens so he made another proposition. It was that the canal company, that is the Utah Sugar company, would themselves build the canal and furnish water direct to the consumer for $30 acre perpetual right. The annual rental would be $2 per acre for the first three years, $1.50 per acre for the next three years and $1 per acre after that. He claimed that the reason they would exact $2 per acre annual rentals was that it would take all that they received from that source to improve and keep the canal in repair during the first years. He said that they had Park. No one who visits the should fail to see Jackson valley never used any of the rental money from the canal on the west side for the he will know that the most beautiful and sublime scenery in the world is in ourpose of paying salaries etc., but that it had all been spent in keeping up and improving the canal. The people were our own land willing to accept this last offer and Mr

Cutler assured them that he would call the board of directors together and say to the people here within ten days just what they could expect from the company.

PROSPEROUS CATS' MEAT MEN

Trade Peculiar to 1 ordon and Some of Its Interesting Features.

Two cases which have within the last few years come before different courts of law amply show how profitable a trade, in London at least, supplying cats' meat is. In one of these cases, a probate suit, a certain testator had left £20,000, every penny of which had practically been made in a little over twenty-seven years by means of a West End cats' meat round, which the testator had originally acquired for a payment of £600 from his father, who, according to one of the witnesses, spent a fortune in "following horse races, The same witness declared that the testator would have left twice as much as he did but for luckless speculations in music hall and public house property. The other case was one that came before the magistrate at Southwark. A comely young woman, about 25 years of age, appeared in the witness box with a profuse display of really fine diamonds. The magistrate-at that time Mr. Fenwick-seemed astonished when the witness told him that she was "a domestic animals' butcher." and further questions elicited the fact that her father had left her the business two years before, and that she cleared out of it £10 a week regularly.

To those who have inquired into the facts of this trade, such a statement would represent but a commonplace. A cats' meat round has frequently yielded anything from £200 to when it came into the market, and there is one well known West End round that changed hands for £1,200 about a about a couple of years ago, But this trade, like mny another, is largely an heredi-tary one, most of the best rounds hav-ing been in the hands of the same famllies during three or four generations. The huge buildings let out into flats, and now so common, have increased the monetary value of cats' meat rounds to a wonderful extent. One single building of this kind is reckoned to be worth £200 a year clear to himself as the 'purveyor" who has the sole right of 'purveyor" who has the sole right of supply, and though this is an exceptional case, other great blocks of fiats are proportionately valuable.

Certain public bulletings, like the gov-ernment ones in Whitehall, have a high Kansas City Stock Yards August 22. -Eugene Rust, traffic manager for the Kansas City Stock Yards company, is value when a round comes into the market. home from a five days' trip through

It must always be recollected that, nlthough most of the purveyors buy dally in one great central market, yet are the in one grant could be absolutely varieties and qualities of meat they ac-quire almost as much diversified as in the case of meat for human beings, and the West end cats' meat provider ob-tains prices that would be absolutely By James E.
