

Roosevelt on Coal Lands And an Income Tax.

ONLY a part of President Roosevelt's address in Jamestown last week, was printed in these columns. His advanced ideas in regard to public lands, and especially his hold advocacy of an income tax, points out that many in his own party do not agree with him—are so important that the Deseret News here reproduces them in full.

Mr. Roosevelt, made the principal topics of his address the question of reshaping the American system of taxation, to make it bear most heavily on those best able to bear it, and the utilization of natural resources of the nation so as to most benefit the country as a whole.

"The conservation of our natural resources and their proper use constitute the fundamental problem which underlies almost every other problem of our national life," said the president. "Unless we maintain an adequate material basis for our civilization we cannot maintain the institutions in which we take so great and so just a pride, and to waste and destroy our natural resources means to undermine this material basis."

PRESERVING PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke of the progress of irrigation in reclaiming arid land for homes, and declared there would be no halt in the work, for the policy was essential to the national welfare. Turning to the public lands, the president dwelt upon the opportunities for fraud under past and present inadequate land laws, the existence of such frauds and the need of radical change in the statutes. He pointed out that Congress had failed to act upon the recommendations of the public lands commission, which should be adopted in order that the government might prevent monopolization of the public land by a few wealthy men.

Preservation of the forests and the government's part therein were explained by Mr. Roosevelt, who then said:

"The mineral fuels of the eastern United States have already passed into the hands of large private owners, and those of the west are rapidly following. This should not be, for such mineral resources belong in a peculiar degree to the whole people."

"Under private control there is much waste from short-sighted methods of working, and the complete utilization is often sacrificed for a greater immediate profit. The mineral fuels under our present conditions are as monopolized by a few as the forests will always be. The difference is that the supply is definitely limited, for coal does not grow and trees do."

"It is obvious that the mineral fuels should be conserved, not wasted, and that enough of them should remain in the hands of the government at to protect the people against unjust or extortionate prices, so far as that can still be done."

CONGRESS FAILS TO ACT.

Mr. Roosevelt told how, last summer, he withdrew temporarily from disposal most of the coal bearing public lands and asked Congress for power to keep the few in the government and to lease the coal oil and gas rights under proper regulation. No such legislation was passed, but the president said he still hoped for it.

The president spoke of the necessity of preserving for the benefit of all the people the 300,000,000 acres of public domain, and of the present methods of disposal, which are open for such use without restriction or regulation.

"When people have increased, as is now the case," said Mr. Roosevelt, "such utter lack of management means that the public domain is turned over to be consumed by men whose only concern is to get what they can out of it at the moment, without any regard to whether or not it is ruined so far as the next generation is concerned."

The only practical remedy, Mr. Roosevelt indicated, was to give the federal government control of the range. Until then its destruction would continue. Better laws were needed, too, to stop public land frauds.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke of the work of the inland waterways commission in preparing a waterway plan for improvement and utilization of the water highways. This work he held especially important in view of the inability of the railroad to meet the demands upon them.

GOVERNMENT MUST CONTROL.

"All who have thoughtfully studied the subject," said the president, "have come to see that the solution of the

YOUNG COCAINE FIENDS.

Deplorable State of Affairs Existing Among Messenger Boys Here.

A gang of youthful cocaine fiends has been discovered by former Chief Probation Officer Hahn of the juvenile court and the question which is now troubling the minds of the juvenile court officials is what to do with them as they are all over 18 years of age and hence cannot be handled in the juvenile court. The matter was brought to the attention of Mr. Hahn by Z. T. Cox, father of one of the boys, who resides at 519 east South Temple street. The father wrote the following letter to Mr. Hahn several days ago, which led up to an investigation being made:

"Mr. Hahn—Will you please call at 519 east Brigham street and get Tangle Cox. He has finally gone to nothing from the use of cocaine. He is here in bed under the influence of it. Knows nothing. If you will come at once you will find him in bed. I want him sent to Ogden as quick as possible. You know he has never been discharged from your court yet. Please attend to this at once. Z. T. COX."

Mr. Hahn went to the address given and found the boy in bed, where he had been for two days under the influence of the drug. The boy gave him the names of a number of boys who stay around the A. D. T. messenger office although he said they were not employed there. Two days later Mr. Cox found his boy lying on a bench in the messenger office under the influence of cocaine.

Mr. Hahn declares that the method of handling the boys is a serious question but that something must be done at once in order to save them. He and Judge Gowan of the juvenile court are carefully considering some means of having the boys cared for but just what will be done they are unable to state at present. The Cox boy told the probation officer that a boy from Los Angeles started them on their cocaine career but that he had now left the city. The officer learned where the boys secured most of their cocaine.
