BREVITIES.

He that helps the wicked, hurts the good.

Death is but a step that reaches to eternity.

The child that cried for an hour didn't get it.

Charity is the scope of all God's commands.

"Invailing a lacteal distillery," is the Cincinnati reportorial for stealing a cow.

What is that which, by losing an eye, has nothing left but a nose? A nose.

A man is generally ready to answer for his courage, especially when it cannot answer for itself.

The man who has brought up standing, must have worn out many shoes and boots.

A correspondent writes to know whether rabbits, foxes, and moles may not be said to inhabit the "hole world?"

"Nothing can be done well that is done in a hurry," oracularly declared a pompous politician in New York, one day lately, on the steps of the City Hall.

"How about catching fleas?" said a wag at his elbow. The politician was flustered.

A Scotch laird had a servant named Thomas who had been with him many years, and the master was present at the servant's funeral. As they were lowering the body into the grave the master was moved even unto tears, and said, with a sob: "O, Tammas, Tammas, I could have trusted you with untold gold!" but immediately appearing to recollect, he added, wiping his eyes, "but no w'f unmeasured whisky."

A young man asked an old gentleman for his daughter in marriage. The answer was, "Go into the orchard and bring in a number of apples. Give me one-half of the whole number and the mother one-half of the balance and half an apple over, and to the daughter one-half of the remainder and half an apple, and have one left for yourself, without cutting an apple, and then if she is willing you can have her." He solved the question, and how many did he bring?

A terrible tragedy has occurred in California. A gentleman recently made a lady a present of a pair of pistols, and after several trials of skill they concluded to go through the forms of a duel. They took their positions, fired at the word, and to the terror of the lady, the gentleman fell. She threw herself frantically upon the corpse, embracing and kissing it with every emotion of endearment. Under such magical influence the gentleman revived, and rose unhurt from the ground, and—and—they are to be married!

A young Russian Princess has a wonderful house in Paris. In the bath room the walls and ceilings are hung with white muslin on a ground of rose colored satin and the floor is covered with white velvet cloth. The water falls into the marble bath from chased silver taps, and above is suspended a diamond from which filters scented waters. The dressing room is lined with gold, shot with pink, grey and silver; two columns of pink and white marble support a table, on which rest a mirror framed in gold and silver foliage; a few choice objects of art stand about, and in the mirror room sky blue hangings of velvet drape the numerous looking-glasses.

Beautify your homes. It costs but a trifle and lasts a long time. A small sum of money invested in adorning and beautifying your houses and yards is that much paid out toward obtaining happiness and contentment. It affords pleasure to the mind and is something that all after they have finished, can see the utility of. Home will be more attractive, and its incidental happiness increased. Nothing has a more marked effect upon a stranger than the sight of a town wherein there has been care, taste and judgement exercised in and about the private dwellings and homes of families. It shows forethought, and not only belongs to the present but the future also. In a financial point of view, it increases the value three-fold, and in sentiment binds the heart to it by many tender associations and recollections. Plant a few flowers, a few trees, and with care you will have a paradise.

I heard an anecdote of Kaffirland today, which, though perfectly irrelevant to our adventures here, is so amusing that I must record it, particularly as my informant vouches for its truth. At an out-post, far up the country, resided an officer and his wife. The latter was warned by her husband not to venture alone far from the house; but one day, imprudently going beyond her usual limits, she encountered a wild-looking Kaffir, who took her by the hand, and would be moved by no entreaties to suffer her to depart. He made her sit down, and, unsipping her bonnet, let down her long fair hair, at which he expressed rapturous admiration. He next took off her gloves, and appeared enchanted with her white hands; and then proceeded to divest her of her shoes and stockings, and wondered at her little white feet. How much further he would have carried his investigations, it is impossible to say, had not the poor lady been rescued by a party of squaws, who with jealousy in their looks and gestures, rushed upon the Kaffir, thus giving her the opportunity of escaping to her home. The next morning the lady and her husband were awakened by a great chattering under their window; and, on enquiring the cause of the disturbance, the gentleman was accosted by the hero of the previous day, who had been so impressed by the charms of our fair countrywoman, that he had come with twelve squaws, to make the liberal offer of exchanging them for the gentleman's wife, and was not a little surprised when his generous terms were refused.—Mrs. L. Page.
