PROSPECTUS

OF THE

UTAH MAGAZINE.

The undersigned announces his intention to publish shortly a Weekly Magazine with the above title, to be edited by himself, and printed at the Office of

THE DESERET NEWS.

This Magazine will consist of twelve pages, each page half the size of the DESERET NEWS. No advertisements will be permitted within the portion devoted to reading matter, but paper has been procured sufficiently large to allow when folded four pages in addition.

FOR A COVER,

which is intended to be taken off when the volume is bound, and answer in the interval as an Advertising Medium.

The Magazine will be edited with a special reference to combining instruction with Amusement. It will have an EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT, Devoted to short lessons in Languages, and attractively written articles on various Sciences, and will be devoted especially, to meet the wants of such of our young men and women as are aspiring to Education and Cultivation. The Magazine will also contain INSTRUCTIONS TO MECHANICS AND ARTISTS,

Which will constitute the volume when complete a storehouse of Useful Information, suitable to each calling respectively.

THE EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT Will be devoted to the defense of our Social System, and to essays on the Laws of Life and Health. It will also be aimed, by seeking from the proper source for correct information, to sustain all movements of the day, designed to assist the moral and intellectual growth of the people.

This department will also include digests of the brightest and best points in current periodicals, which shall be entitled

"THE CREAM OF THE PAPERS," Giving our readers such advantages as these journals present, freed from all views and sentiments unsuitable to us as a people. To this division will be added ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

THE DEPARTMENT OF

ENTERTAINMENT AND AMUSEMENT

Will present the following variety for Family Reading:

The best Historical Tales, Remarkable Adventures of Travelers and others, a Portrait Gallery—or pen and ink sketches of illustrious individuals, New Theories of Modern Thinkers, Gossip of the day about Notabilities, and scenes of transpiring events, Selections from the Great Humorists of the time—such as Charles Dickens. To these will be added Current Witteisms, Hints to Farmers, Notices of New Inventions, Practical Receipts, Suitable Selections for the Lady's Table, and Parlor Amusements for the young.

By this combination it is hoped to present a Magazine, useful to the Student, the Mechanic, the Artist, or the general reader—a pleasant visitor to our firesides, an invaluable source of reference when bound; and the foundation of a Family Library in every home.

It is also hoped by presenting good works to encourage a taste for the best class of writers, and thus displace the hold of sensational novel trash in the minds of the young, thereby insuring a pure class of reading matter at our firesides.

TERMS:

No kind of pay will be refused that can be made available to meet the expenses of the Magazine. The price will be as follows:

Delivered at the residence of the subscriber in the city, or sent through the Post to the settlements, $7 per year.

Delivered at the residence of the subscriber in the city, or sent through the Post to the settlements, per half year, $4 IN ADVANCE.

CLUBS.

Any person obtaining us six subscribers, will receive a copy for the year free, on receipt of the pay by any of our agents. This will present an easy opportunity to any of our young folks or other persons desirous of obtaining a copy without cost. Seven persons clubbing together and forwarding the amount, will receive the Magazine for the price of six subscriptions.

Subscriptions and Advertisements will be received at

THE OFFICE OF THE UTAH MAGAZINE

THE CRIMSON UMBRELLA.

In the Methodist Recorder (London), we find the following story of a crimson umbrella, which, while it contains a good hit at the public, which is ever ready to meddle with business in no wise concerning it, has a moral also for a class of reformers who are ready to set themselves in opposition to popular opinion in matters involving no question of morals or principle:

"Some years ago, an English gentleman arrived at his lodging in Pall Mall, with a bright crimson-colored cotton umbrella in his possession. The article was one in common use in the country from which he had come, and he had bought it without thought. A few days' residence in the climate of England naturally occasioned the use of an umbrella, and he took his foreign acquisition with him into the streets of London. It answered his purpose; it kept off the rain, and our hero was not particular about the indifferent accidents of color and fabric. But he soon became aware that his appearance was creating a sensation. Every one turned and stared after him; the crossing-sweeper stood aghast and forgot to beg; then a little crowd gathered at his heels, and people began to give expression to their opinion. Some said he was a foreign spy; some thought he was a Red Republican refugee; but all agreed that he was an exceptional and dangerous person. Being a man of plain common-sense, he at once concluded that this was too heavy a cost to bear for the sake of a five-shilling umbrella; so he folded up the too remarkable article, and submitted to a sprinkling on his way home.

"A few days afterward, he was visited by a gentleman not very much in the habit of deferring to public opinion, who was, indeed, rather fond of being remarkable. An English shower was falling when this guest took leave, and the owner of the umbrella, while telling the story, offered him the loan of it. The dauntless dandy laughed at his friend's weakness, and sallied forth canopied by the bright crimson. There was the same sensation. At first he was pleased to be the object of attention. But the crowd began to accumulate; the little boys asked him questions; the cads of the omnibusses, always inimical to umbrellas, shouted impertinent observations to him; the crowd pressed upon him; and when people asked each other what was the matter, guesses soon grew into the form of actual assertions. Sometimes he was a ticket-of-leave man; sometimes he was identified with some notorious criminal of whom the police were in search. The popular hostility was too great even for him; he returned the umbrella.

"The original proprietor told his story to many, and among others, to a young man of a determined but rather bilious temperament, who did everything, to the paring of his nails and the tying of his cravat, on principle. He was indignant at the popular tyranny. What was there in the color of an umbrella? There was no moral harm in bright crimson. He would set himself against the despotism of the public. He took the umbrella, with all its responsibilities, and persisted in carrying it. He always had a little mob of urchins at his heels; he was thrice times in a police office; he was often hustled and robbed; twice his umbrella was broken to pieces, and he had another made upon the same pattern. The companionship of his umbrella became more important to him than his business; he was even ready to be a martyr in the cause of bright crimson. The story says that, in the end, he grew morose, and, as some thought, not quite right in his mind, because crimson umbrellas would not come into fashion."

A PATENT has been granted to a Maine mechanic for an invention for running shafting at right angles or at any angle without the use of gearing or belting. The idea is entirely novel, and works to a charm. A slide-bar is placed in the angle, and motion transferred by the action of a double crank on each shaft.
