THE WEEK REVIEWED

New Year festivities dominated the week, the whole social atmosphere being tinged with its spirit. Watch parties, receptions and evening parties celebrating the new year were numerous throughout the city, both formal and otherwise, and there have been besides a number of other events whose notably delightful nature have helped to make the week's festivities delightful.

On New Year's day the homes of many prominent people were thrown open to their friends. Gov. and Mrs. Wells received, assisted by well known people. The rooms were beautifully decorated in holiday colors, festoons of emulax and asparagus fern being artistically used with the holly, while red shaded lights aided in the effect. In the parlor American beauty roses were used, and a large American flag draped the front entrance. Gov. and Mrs. Wells were assisted by Mrs. Katz, Mrs. Alma D. Katz, Mrs. C. S. Burton, Mrs. Frank Jennings, and Mrs. McClure. Among the visitors were the officers from Fort Douglas, and the governor's staff. An orchestra stationed up stairs furnished music, and at 3 o'clock the First Regiment band of the N. G. U. serenaded the governor.

Mr. and Mrs. James Neill and Miss Neill entertained delightfully at their home on north State street, assisted by Mesdames George H. Taggart, Igleheart, Sol Siegel, O. B. Hewitt, Kate Bridwell Anderson, and Rosemary Glose Whitney, Miss Creary and Miss Darling. The rooms were prettily decorated, and shaded lights brightened the darkened rooms. Music was a feature of the entertainment which was all of the most delightfully informal nature.

At the home of Miss Leta McMillan a charming party of young girls were gathered to receive the large number of guests who called during the afternoon and evening. Red and green were the prevailing colors with the exception of the dining room, which was done in pink and white. Misses Mildred and Bees McMillan served punch in the hall, and assisting the hostess in receiving and serving were the Misses McGrath, Dooly, Donnellan, Salisbury and Read.

The home of Mrs. Edwin F. Holmes was thrown open for the day, and a large number called to enjoy the hospitality of the hostess. Mrs. J. T. Harris assisted.

Miss Judge and Mrs. R. H. Channing received informally at the home of Miss Judge, the rooms being beautifully decorated for the occasion. Miss Burke assisted, and in the evening a keno party was enjoyed, about 40 being present to participate in the pleasant affair.

The home of the Misses Hyde was thrown open to their friends on New Year's day, and they, assisted by Miss Kethie Dougall and Miss Williams, received the large number who called during the afternoon and evening. The rooms were prettily decorated and refreshments were served.

Among the delightful events of the week was the cotillion given at Fort Douglas on New Year's eve, the affair being the first of a series that will be given during the remainder of the season. The hall was tastefully decorated and delightful music was furnished by the regimental band. The affair was under direction of a committee composed of Mrs. Sturgis, Mrs. Pardee, Miss Bub, Capt. Harbeson, Lieut. Merrill and Capt. Sturgis as chairman.

Poulton at their residence, 574 Second street, on New Year's day, and was carried out with great success. The members of both families were all present, numbering about 50 guests and all partook of an elaborate supper. The evening was spent in dancing, singing and card playing. After exchanging the compliments of the New Year they adjourned to their homes, a special car being held for them till 1:30 a. m.

On Wednesday night Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tate entertained the members of their social club at their home, the event being chiefly in the nature of a watch party, though the usual pastime was enjoyed up to midnight. Refreshments were served and a jolly time spent.

Misses Pearl Clark and Irene Short entertained pleasantly at cards on Tuesday evening.

The gold room at the Alta club on Tuesday was the scene of one of the most yet given there. Mrs. S. H. Babcock being the hostess. The room was banked with palms and hung with holly, the mirror having a wreath of the holiday emblem, and at its foot a hedge of azaleas and Roman hyacinths. The table formed a beautiful picture. It was in the shape of a Maltese cross and the yellow square in the center was filled with a bed of palms and American beauties. Along the arms of the cross extended thick ropes of smilax, set with lilies of the valley and hyacinths. Red incandescent lights gleamed from the flowers and from the chandelier ropes of smilax were brought to the corners of the central space.

At each corner stood tall candelabra shaded in red, and behind a bank of palms was an orchestra, which dispensed delightful music. The place cards were in the holiday shades and had designs of Gibson girls. Those present were Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Holman, Mrs. Downey, Mrs. Wells, Miss Harkness, Mrs. Holmes, Mrs. Charles Walker, Mrs. Sharp, Mrs. Kearns, Miss Mil-

CLUB CHAT

One of the most ingenious instances of the American cubism's ability to make money comes from the Woman's Club of Butte, Mont.

This club, with the bustling spirit of its own western city, hit upon the clever idea, not long ago, of placing in its clubrooms an immense triple screen for the purpose of renting space to merchants for advertisements. The idea took instantly with shrewd business men, so that the income from this source for the first month was $100 and has since averaged $100 a month. These wise women of the West, moreover, make a point of announcing from the platform each week the special sales which their advertisers have in progress. The whole plan therefore has a sound business principle that promises to continually appeal to the men of Butte.

Though the new president of this club with an original financial policy is Mrs. W. W. Cheely, the advertising screen should be credited to a member of the club, Mrs. William J. Christie, who is widely known as an ex-director of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Following a happy inspiration one evening she drew up a plan of the screen on a half-inch scale. She hand-
