A WORD OF RESTRAINT.

WE call attention to what has assumed the dimensions of a serious public evil. We refer to the extraordinary disposition that has been manifested by the people of this! city, Ogden and other places in the Territory, during the present summer, to indulge in 'expensive pleasures, such as excursious, etc. We feel called upon to utter a word of warning and restraint upon this subject, for the reason that the masses of the people are not in a pecuniary condition to afford these luxuries, and that, if indulgence in them is continued, there will be felt as a consequence, particularly during the winter months that always arrive before the poor are prepared for them, a considerable amount of want and suffering.

To illustrate: The statement is made that for some time past, the people of Ogden have spent an average of $2,000 per week in excursions to the lake and that two excursions in one day from that city to the beach, are not unusual occurrences. The masses of the people of Ogden are in no condition to bear, for any length of time, such a heavy drain as this. Remember, this $2,000 is not payable in trade. produce, or those things which the people can create with their tabox. It is a tax payable only in hard cash. Who pays it? Everybody contributes to it; the poorly-paid clerk; the mechanic who finds work scarce; the laboring man, whose children will soon be crying for shees; the housewife, whose grocer's bill is not paid; the servant girl, who has only her scanty wages to place between herself and want, or perhaps dishonor; the schoolboy, who is but poorly provided with school books; all these participate in frequent excursions to the Lake or elsewhere, or some similar recreation.

What is true of Ogden, is at least proportionately true of this city; indeed it is questionable if Salt Lakers do not lead in the matter of indulgence in pleasure-seeking of the kind referred to. And yet in this city, times have not for years been as stringent among the laboring classes as they are this summer. Labor is scarce, wages are low, and the heavy cloud that hangs over our afflicted Territory casts a dark shadow over the immediate financial future. At a time when economy, frugality and thrift ought, to characterize our people, a powerful inuence seems to have seized upon struggling young merchant, : or professional man, or person of similar station in life, is entirely out offashion if he does not, in addition to other expensive recreations, go "on a fishing trip"or to the mountains for a few days or weeks. And what does such an indulgence cost? Enough, in some instances perhaps, to buy flour, coal and vegetables to last a good sized family a whole season, or pay for is cottage building site; or even go far towards the erection of a modest home. No young man can succeed in life who permits himself to indulge in such extravagance as this. He will find himself continually involved in financial embarrassments that will sadly curtail his progress and prevent his success, and which no income that he can earn will be sufficient to forestall.

Considerations of a pecuniary character are ample justification for a protest against the wholesale indulgence in excursions, bathing in the Lake, trips to the mountains, etc., now going on in portions of this Territory. But there are other reasons more potent than any monetary consideration could possibly be, why the Latter-day Salats should exercise a restraint in this regard. . We refer to the moral phases of the matter, and to the peril in which virtue, honor and chastity are placed by this excessive spirit of and indulgence in pleasureseeking. The influences that may very easily be introduced among a party of young people jcamping in the mountains, and free for the time being, and to a certain extent, from the restraints of life at home, may be very hurtfui; and especially may this be said of the influences that usually attend evening excursions and balls in out-of-the-way places.

Bathing in the lake, if not too expensive, and freed from objectionable features, would be a healthful indulgence, by no means to be condemned. But the concomitants usually attending it at all of the present bathing iresorts render it a matter of a demoralizing tendency. The class of persons whom the respectable must meet, the scant costumes, the drinking and the other evil associations and influences that are connected with the bathing resorts, render them places to be avoided.

No people ever became strong or powerful who were devoted to pleasure-secking; and when any nation has attained to a position of power and supremacy in the earth, and then retrogaded, its decadence has begun simultaneously with the development of a disposition on the part of its people to devote themselves to pleasure and luxury. On the other hand, when any nation of even mediocre intellectual capacity,
