

Captain Boyton's Parrot.

Captain Paul Boyton owns a talking parrot which has a habit of imitating crying babies. On Friday the Captain was bringing the bird in a basket to New York from his home at Flushing. Suddenly the passengers in the ladies' cabin on the ferryboat heard the wailing of an infant proceed from the basket at the Captain's side. As the sound increased the passengers stared at Boyton, who got red in the face and gave the basket a gentle kick. Then an old lady became indignant and said something about a "big brute." The kick seemed to have aroused Polly's feelings, for the screaming grew louder. The staring of the passengers became unbearable, and the Captain seized the basket and hurried to the front of the boat in evident embarrassment, for he is not a married man. He was followed by all the passengers, who watched him narrowly as he stood by the railing. When the boat landed at the foot of Thirty-fourth street and Boyton reached the street, he was accosted by a policeman.

"Captain," said the officer, "there's an old gent says you've got a baby in the basket."

"What nonsense!" said Boyton, as a crowd gathered; "and suppose I have?"

"Well, it's a curious way to carry a child, and you'll excuse me if I insist on seeing it. It's my duty, you know."

"All right," said the Captain, as he cut the cover of the basket open with a penknife. The parrot stuck its head out of the basket and yelled, "Polly wants a cracker!"

And now the policeman would like to meet the "old gent" who gave him the information which led to the laughter which followed.—N. Y. Herald.

Sham Jewelry.

The recent experience of a London lady of rank, who wished to sell some jewels, goes to prove that shams are not newer than other things under the sun. Regarding what were supposed to be splendid rubies, the jeweler said: "They are certainly very showy, madam, but unfortunately only clever imitations in glass!" The lady, much chagrined, then called attention to the heavy setting, to which the jeweler replied, after the usual tests, "The setting is only gilt!" Another article produced for appraisal was a superb bracelet, the gift of a Continental sovereign, to the wife of a distinguished diplomatist. The skillful manufacture and specific gravity of this splendid object had been extolled for generations in the family of the possessor, and so highly was it prized that it was invariably sent to the bankers whenever the family went out of town. The jeweler scrutinized it carefully, and announced it to be extremely heavy; "but," he added, "if you will allow me, madam, to raise this very thin plate, I shall be able to show you that the bracelet is filled up with—lead!" Yet it is quite possible that the original purchasers of these articles believed them to be genuine, and paid for them as such. A few years ago an English gentleman took a bracelet to a leading provincial English jeweller to have the clasp mended. The jeweller looked at the stone carefully, and then said: "You are aware that this is not genuine?" "Not genuine!" exclaimed the gentleman. "You must be mistaken. This was given to my wife on her marriage by my uncle, the last man in the world to give sham jewelry." But the jeweller, an eminent man in his line, persisting, the donor was informed. He wrote back that it had cost $500, and ordered that it be at once sent to him; and, taking it to Messrs. — a firm of the first eminence, indignantly stated his case. It was sham. They offered a check at once, or a new bracelet, and seemed terribly chagrined. The explanation was that, do what they would, they were at times the victims of their workmen, who substituted admirably made bogus gems for real ones. Probably scores of persons have jewelry thought to be real which in truth is not.

Liberty and Religion.

The religious census of Victoria, in which every one has been at liberty to enter his religion in any manner which best pleased his fancy, as a very curious document.

Of 862,346 persons, very nearly 300,000 (i. e. 299,542) return themselves as belonging to the Church of England, nearly 200,000 (more exactly, 197,157) as Roman Catholics, considerably over 100,000 as Presbyterians of some shade or other, and nearly the same number as Methodists of some shade or other, while of the other Protestant sects none much exceed 20,000—about the number of Baptists, the Independents falling in numbers slightly below the Baptists. Eleven thousand are returned as Pagans. But the curious thing is the number of fancy religions. There is one Borrowite, one Millerite, one Walkerite, one Colensoite, one who returns himself as a "Silent Admirer," one as a Theosophic, and five who belong to the "Church of Eli Sands." There are twenty who declare that they have "No Church at present, no creed," three who call themselves "Saved sinners," one who is a "Believer in parts of the Bible," two who call themselves "Neutrals," and three who state their religion as "£ s. d." Probably, a much greater number might have declared themselves adherents to these last two creeds, had Victorian candor been as great as Victorian liberty.

Three years ago St. Julian, the great California trotter was unknown; the same may be said of Kendall's Spavin Cure. Now both have a world wide reputation. Why? Because they both have merit. One is a great trotter, the other is the most successful remedy ever discovered to be used on man or beast.—Read advt.
