He had gone out there on one of the earliest trains, or-dered a room and retired to take a bath. He was absent a long time and the at-tendants became alarmed. One of them went to the door of his room and knocked vigorously but obtained no re-ply. This further increased the alarm felt as to his condition and the man climbed up under the roof to a posi-tion that permitted him to look directly into Poweil's plunge. He was horror at the bottom of the pool and in an instant was at the door with assist-ance for forcing it Open. The room was broken into and Poweil's body taken from the hot water. There was every evidence that he had been dead for a considerable time. The county attorney's office was noti-fied and Justice C. M. Nielsen dis-patched to the scene to take observa-tions and hold an inquest if necessary. The latter proceeding was found to be a needless one as inquiry developed tions and hold an inquest if necessary. The latter proceeding was found to be a needless one as inquiry developed the fact that the man died from rheu-matism of the heart, a trouble with which he had been afflicted for some time. The remains were turned over to Pratt and Hall, undertakers, and brought to this city this afternoon. Powell is an old resident here, about 50 years of age and leaves a wife from whom he 'was separated, and two daughters. He was well known as a lawn-mover about the city and in that lawn-mower about the city and in that capacity had served the Baptist church, whose pastor was notified of the scarlet fever and bronchitis. Other children in the familyhave been afflicted with the former trouble, but are now convalescent. In the case of little Ruth, however, bronchitis came to complicate the already serious condition, and she was unable to withstand the combined ravages of both ailments. She combined rayages of both aliments. She was a bright, winsome and affection-ate child, and her death is a serious blow to her parents and friends. Prest. Smith and family have the sympathy of the entire community in the be-reavement they have sustained, and the "News" trusts that the consolation that comes from the Father effective that comes from the Father of all may be theirs.

certificate was issued? Mr. Bishop, replying today, says: I assume from your inquiry that no administrator has been appointed. As a matter of law, neither the widow nor any other person would be author-ized to transact any business pertain-ing to the estate of the decedent unless duly constituted as an executor or ad-ministrator thereof. The proper pro-cedure in such case, in my judgment, would be to withhold certificate until an executor or administrator, as the case may be, is duly constituted and authorized to act as the legal repre-sentative of the deceased party. authorized to act as the legal sentative of the deceased party.

Yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock the remains of Sidney H. Neergaard were interred at Mt. Olivet cemetery—the burial and funeral services being un-der the auspices of prominent mem-bers of the University club, and repre-sentatives of most every life insurance areney in the div sentatives of most every life insurance agency in the city. Mr. Neergaard's acquaintance in the city was limited as he had just re-turned to Salt Lake, after a protracted absence of many years, but his recent sojourn had endeared him to many that he had recently met. He was a young man of exceptional ability as an insurance agent, besides possessing a marked degree of culture, and re-search in literature. None of his im-mediate relatives or friends attended the interment, as their homes are too the interment, as their homes are too far removed from Salt Lake to arrive in time. So in the words of the poet it may virtually be said— "By foreign hands his dying eyes were composed;

By foreign hands his humble grave adorned,

By strangers honored and by strangers mourned.'

Nowhere, except in his home, will Nowhere, except in his nome, will Bishop Eilas Morris's social presence and influence be missed more than by the members of the Balt Lake Cam-brian association. To them he was in-deed a true and staunch friend, ever to ready advance the cause of ready to advance the cause of the Eisteddfod, at home and throughout the State. FROM SATURDAY'S DAILY, MARCH 19.

Brigham City News: Bishop Thomas Harper of Lake Side was very badly injured last week. He and his sons were lifting a heavy road plow out of a wagon, when from some cause the plow slipped, knocking the Bishop down. He received the full weight of the plow on his body and it was at first thought that his injuries were quite serious. We are pleased to learn that he is much better, and is able to be around again.

Brigham City News: From Orson Hudson we learn that sheep ranged in the western part of the county have never done better than the past win-ter. The losses have been very slight. He does not anticipate that the pres-
