

BREVITIES.

Delphi, out in Indiana, has the following dog ordinance: "Dogs that are not collared and labeled, no matter how respectably connected, will have their narratives amputated one inch south of their ears!"

A Salisbury (Conn.) man recently hitched a yoke of oxen to a horse that "laid back in the breeching." The horse's head was not put on firmly enough to test the question whether he or the oxen were the strongest.

An Irishman, with a heavy bundle on his shoulder, riding on the front of a horse-car, was asked why he did not set his bundle on the platform. He replied: "Be jabbers, the horses have enough to drag me—I'll carry the bundle."

At a collection lately made at a charity fair a young lady offered the plate to a rich man who was noted for his stinginess. "I have nothing," was his curt answer. "Then take something, sir," she replied; "you know I am begging for the poor."

It is said women would walk much better if they would pace up and down their room for an hour every day with a heavy book poised on their head, which it would seem gives the most crooked person an erect and graceful figure.

The Sacramento Bee says that the financial condition of California was never better, and its health is excellent. Good crops and plenty of employment for all willing hands, are the basis of all real prosperity, and these California is now blessed with.

At a marriage lately in Maine the bride's voice faltered, and she paused in the midst of the impressive ceremony. Her little niece, a bright little three-year old, thinking the naughty minister was compelling poor aunt to say something disagreeable, stamped her little foot and exclaimed in a tone of authority, "Aunt, don't say it."

Smith thought it was morally wrong to take animals for food, and he resolved to quit it and live on vegetables. One morning he gave way to temptation and walked into a beefsteak.

"I don't know," said he, "that it's any harm to eat a piece of cow, it's dead and the matter can't be helped, but I'll be hanged if I ever kill one!"

I asked a little boy last evening—"Have you called your grandma to tea?" "Yes. When I went to call her she was asleep, and I didn't know how to wake her. I didn't wish to hallo at grandma, nor shake her; so I kissed her cheek, and that woke her very softly. Then I ran into the hall, and said, pretty loud, 'Grandma, tea is ready,' and she never knew what woke her."—Ex.

To Remove Warts.—Take good indigo, such as is used by the laundress, soak it in water; with a knife pare away the surface of the warts so as to cause the blood to flow. Wipe off the blood and drop the indigo water on them. Very large ones may require a second application. The indigo produces no pain whatever. I have used and recommended this cure to many persons, and have never known it to fail but once.—Rural New Yorker.

A man was urged to take out a policy for the benefit of his wife to the amount of five thousand dollars. He asked his wife's opinion, when she replied with charming frankness:

"Why my dear, you will, of course, act according to your own judgment; but, in case of your decease, it would make me a most desirable widow."

A little girl came into my house one day, and some apple parings lay on a plate on the table. After sitting awhile she said:

"I smell apples!" "Yes," I replied, "I guess you smell those apple parings on the plate." "No, no!" said she, "Taint them I smell; I smell whole apples!"

The night is mother of the day, The winter of the spring, And ever upon the old decay, The greenest mosses cling. Behind the clouds the starlight lurks, Through showers the sunbeams fall; For God, who loveth all His works, Has left His hope with all.

—Whittier.

Let a young man go on from fifteen to thirty-five, robbing his body of natural sleep, racking it with the insalubrious employment of convivial life, taxing his nervous system by the abuse of such narcotics as tobacco, and such stimulants as alcohol, and he will find himself sooner or later shorn of his manly strength, deficient in mental vigor, lacking in physical endurance, and a prey to ten thousand weaknesses of mind and muscle.—C. R. Agnew, M. D.

An enthusiastic reporter on a Pennsylvania paper, in speaking of the bell of the evening, remarked that "the profusion and color of her hair would lead one to look upon it as though it was spun by nimble fingers of the easy hours, as they glided through the bright June days, whose many sunny rays of the light had been caught in the meshes, and were content to go no further." This was much better than saying that her hair was red.
