LOCAL AND OTHER MATTERS.

THERMOMETER 90° in the shade at two o'clock to-day.

THEATRE.—There was a very good house last night at Mr. Stetson's benefit, and the satisfaction felt at the performance of "Daring Dick the Detective," seemed to be general and genuine, for the piece was well played throughout, without a hitch from first to last, and never probably has the first presentation of a play been more successful. "Daring Dick" is one of the very best pieces of the sensation class that has yet been produced in this city; the interest never flags, and though in some small matters it is strained and rather unnatural, as a whole there is little doubt that it is what it professes to be—a "realistic picture of life in the city of New York."

The piece will be repeated to-night, and as it is well worth seeing, the following very brief synopsis of its plot and circumstances may be timely: Isaac Van Orden is the stern and wealthy parent of two beautiful daughters, "Celia and Olivia," the former of whom, "Edgar de Lancy" and "Daring Dick" are anxious to procure for a wife; De Lancey, the villain of the piece, and the choice and favorite of the father, cares for the girl only that he may procure her father's wealth. Daring Dick loves her for herself only, and his passion is returned; but the father is his bitter enemy, and threatens to disinherit his daughter if she marries against his will. This threat has no effect, and Dick and Celia are married. But the clouds of adversity soon darken the horizon of their married life, and deep poverty overtakes them, and in their distress a written appeal is made to the stern father, but he, manipulated by De Lancey, is unrelenting, and sends an angry reply, refusing assistance, and disowning his daughter. The latter at length sinks through privation and hunger, leaving an infant son in the care of her sorrow-stricken husband. Just after her demise her sister Olivia, with her father and De Lancey, enter the room of death, to render assistance if possible, but too late for that the old man offers to take his daughter's child and rear and educate him, but the offer is rejected by both father and child, and an angry altercation between Dick and Van Orden and De Lancey closes the act.

In the third act we find Dick deprived of his little son, who has been stolen from him, and all his efforts to discover him have been vain; but finally he and some of his aides get on the scent, and it appears that the child has been stolen by DeLancey, with the knowledge of the grandfather, and placed, as the old man thinks, at a respectable boarding school, but in reality at a low miserable place where he is being beaten and starved to death, this being the plan of DeLancey, who is now trying to court Van Orden's second daughter, and, determined to remove all obstacles to the speedy obtaining of her and her father's wealth, is slowly poisoning the old man, and having the child starved to death. As the old man's health begins to fail his heart is touched a little with remorse on account of the death of his eldest daughter, but he still thinks that De Lancey is his dearest friend, and he is determined to leave him all his wealth unless his second daughter marries him. However, by long and patient watching and working on the part of Daring Dick, his long lost child is discovered and rescued, and the crime and perfidy of De Lancey are exposed, and the final tableau is the death of the latter by a shot from Dick's pistol.

The various roles were well sustained. Mr. Stetson played his part with very great ability; Messrs. Thorne, Graham, Marden, Paul, Miss Jean Clara Walters, and the Misses Dellie and Edith Clawson rendered excellent support; and all who wish to see a first-class sensation play should visit the Theatre this evening, when "Daring Dick" will be repeated.

PANACCA MINE.—We understand the Panacca mine, Mineral Fork, Big Cottonwood District, is about to be placed in the San Francisco market. The claim is owned at present by a company of six, who, not being capitalists, are desirous of disposing of it to enable them to push the development of other claims owned by them in the same locality. The Panacca is said to be giving very promising indications.

"DEMI-MONDE. — Four women were arrested to-day on charges of establishing and keeping houses of prostitution, on Commercial street. The case by request of counsel were continued till Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

THE American Liquor Men's Advocate, a National Representative of the American Liquor Interest. Published at Pittsburg Pa. a new weekly journal.

WEDDING CARDS.—We have received in one envelope, two very neat cards, on one of which is printed, in ornamental old English chariceter, "Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Marden;" on the other "Miss Susie Spenser," which we believe is the fashionable mode of intimating, that Mr. E. B. Marden and Miss Susie Spencer have been made one in the holy bonds of matrimony. Miss Spencer is the daughter of Mr. Claudius V. Spencer of this city, and Mr. Marden is a well known resident here, having been, for somewhere about two years past, a member of the dramatic company of the Salt Lake Theatre. We extend to the happy pair our congratulations on their marriage, and hope their future experience may prove to them that

"The joys of marriage are the heaven on earth,
Life's paradise, * * * the soul's quiet,
Sinews of concord, earthly immortality,
Eternity of pleasures."

PIPES FOR THE CITY WATERWORKS.—The gentleman sent East, on the 3rd inst., by the Corporation of Salt Lake, to negotiate for the purchase of pipes for the water works, shortly to be constructed in this city, reached home last night, and called at our office to-day, and informed us that he had contracted with the Rochester Laminated Pipe and Package Company, of New York, for four miles of pipe, from twenty inches down to four inches in diameter, of their manufacture, to be forwarded, commencing on the 12th of next month, and as fast thereafter as manufactured. We saw a specimen of the six inch pipe. It is elm wood, and is manufactured by winding broad, thin hoops, or laminæ of wood, made continuous by joining the ends spirally around a form the size of the pipe required, every alternate layer being wound in an opposite direction to the last, and crossing it diagonally, each layer being cemented together by passing through boiling asphaltum, a coating of the same material being on the internal and external surface of the pipe. When a sufficient thickness is obtained—the six inch pipe being ¾ of an inch thick—the form is taken down from the inside, leaving the pipe free, the process of manufacture being completed by squaring and trimming the ends. The pipe is considered very durable, from tests observed by the gentleman who purchased for the city it is capable of resisting a pressure of 400 pounds to the square inch.

The amount of pipe already purchased—four miles—is merely for a beginning, the design of the city fathers being to extend it as fast as the demand for water in the different localities will justify the step in so doing.

SIDE-WALKS.—Good sidewalks are very convenient and agreeable to pedestrians, and every owner of a house or lot, as well as every tenant, who improves the sidewalk is a public benefactor and is justly entitled to the gratitude of the public. Plank sidewalks are common, not that they but are better than any other kind; when in good condition they are serviceable and do very well. Yet, if laid down at all, they should be kept in good condition, otherwise they are a nuisance. Bad plank sidewalks in many an American city detract from its appearance and give an air of slovenliness to the place. Some of the plank sidewalk in Second South Street is in very bad repair, and there are many unpleasant places of the nature of foot traps which on a dark night must be really dangerous.

There certainly should be some method of compelling the repairing of these sidewalks, and the keeping of them in tolerable condition, otherwise it is better not to have the sidewalks planked or rather boarded.

NEEDS SOME ATTENTION. — A reliable gentleman, in from the southern portion of the Territory, called at our office this morning, and mentioned a couple of little matters worthy the attention of those who have authority in the localities referred to. The first is the flooding of the high road south of the settlement of Scipio, which is now in such a bad condition that it is almost impossible for a team to cross without miring. This is bad enough, but the second item complained of is much worse and is a nuisance that should be promptly abated. It is a whisky establishment pretty near the Sevier bridge. Our informant says that a certain class of young men residing in the country in that vicinity, are in the habit of making this place a rendezvous, and getting drunk, using foul language when in that condition, and creating a good deal of annoyance; and last Sunday week a party of this rowdy element, when sufficiently full of the abomination there dispensed, got to quarrelling, drew their knives on each other and for a time there was every prospect of a serious disturbance and bloodshed. Such proceedings are disgraceful at any time, but above all on a Sunday; and we hope the citizens residing in that locality will immediately take the necessary steps to have the nuisance abated, and to prevent in the future a repetition of such disgraceful scenes and proceedings.
