

flight, but the farm was gobbled up by the lawyers, and his means utterly exhausted. Finally the attorney-general of the colony declared that the wrong verdict should be expunged, and the right verdict substituted for it only through a special act of the imperial parliament and the royal assent thereto.

APPEARED IN VAIN.

Public feeling in behalf of the old man who had been beggared in his efforts to obtain justice was strongly aroused in Tasmania. A fund was raised to enable him to come to England and prosecute his claim here. He arrived in 1888. He appeared to Queen Victoria, to privy council, to the house of lords and to King Edward, and the only result has been an accumulation of documentary evidence that would nearly fill a furniture van. The wrong verdict still stands against him. No compensation for a fortune dissipated in striving to get it set right has been awarded him. But sustained by the bountiful fare provided for him through Seddon's generosity the old man still continues his gallant fight against legal red tape and circumlocution. He declares that he will not return to Tasmania until he has obtained a decision one way or the other. The chances are that he will be dead, and probably buried in a pauper's grave, before it is reached.

Was Wasting Away.

"I had been troubled with kidney disease for the last five years," writes Robert R. Watts, of Salem, Mo. "I lost flesh and never felt well and doctored with leading physicians and tried all remedies suggested without relief. Finally I tried Foley's Kidney Cure and less than two bottles completely cured me and I am now sound and well." During the summer kidney irregularities are often caused by excessive drinking or being overworked. Attend to the kidneys at once by using Foley's Kidney Cure. For sale by F. J. Hill Drug Co.

AMERICAN WIDOW TO LIVE IN ENGLAND.

Special Correspondence.

LONDON, July 22.—Another wealthy American woman has decided to make her home in England. She is Mrs. Franklyn Barton, who lived for some years in St. Louis, but who has made her home for some time past in New York. Her husband accumulated his fortune in railway and mining speculations and although she has not made any great pretensions to wealth in the United States she is understood to be mistress of a couple of million dollars which amounts to a good deal here. She intends having both a London and a country residence and according to negotiations that are at present proceeding it is probable that she will become the tenant, and perhaps the owner, of the lovely residence in Clodogan gardens where Mrs. Langtry lived when she was the reigning favorite of King Edward who was then Prince of Wales. He used to visit her there, and it was at that house occurred the famous chunk of ice episode which so chilled the royal backbone and shocked the prince's sense of dignity that he cut the Jersey Lily dead next day in Hyde park. One of the most commodious mansions on the Earl of Cadogan's estate it has lost nothing in value because of the association with royalty and beauty. When it is let furnished for the society season it commands easily $1,500 a month. Mrs. Barton's country residence will be somewhere in the neighborhood of Manchester as she has family connections with the great cotton city, from whence her husband's ancestors came. She is herself a native of New Bedford, Mass., and although she means to make her home permanently in England she will pay annual visits to the United States to look after some interests which she has in railways and mines there.

YOUNG ASTOR DEFENDS AMERICANS.

Special Correspondence.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—What appeared to be but a trivial matter at first nearly culminated in a nasty row at one of the West End clubs a few days ago. The parties to the dispute were William Waldorf Astor's son and a well known English nobleman. For some time past English noblemen and others have been importing American motor drivers in preference to Frenchmen, while English drivers have also been frequently cast aside when they could be conveniently replaced by Americans. King Edward set the fashion, but in spite of this fact much hostility is exhibited towards the American drivers and every opportunity is taken advantage of to "cast him in" on the roads.

Young Astor was "motored" one day and as his car, which he was driving himself, possessed greater speed than that driven by the guardman, he tried to pass him on the road. The officer wobbled his car in and out and went on for a considerable distance before he allowed young Astor to pass. As the looks were exchanged and the matter dropped until they met at the club in question.

An argument was commenced in the smoking room on the relative merits of English and American drivers. The guardman maintained that he could run "any American huffer off the road."

"Yes," remarked young Astor laughingly, "if you kept wobbling about like a duck in a thunderstorm as you did the other day on the Brighton road."

"I am an officer and a gentleman," indignantly observed the guardman, "and you must withdraw that remark. I will not," responded Mr. Astor, "and what is more, I will repeat it every time when I hear you disparaging my countrymen."

"Your countrymen," sneered the officer, "Your father abandoned America to become a British subject, and you are a British subject too."

"I don't care what my father is," retorted young Astor hotly. "I am an American and as an American I stand by what I have said."

They stood facing each other in a threatening attitude, and had not mutual friends intervened there would probably have been an exchange of blows.

THE SIXPENNY DOCTOR.

London Physicians Who Work in the Shams for a Nominal Fee.

IN the poor district of London and the great manufacturing centers there are plenty of "six-penny doctors," as they are called, and even "four-penny" ones are to be met with. These are fully-qualified medical men, often of great skill, who set themselves up in a shop for a surgery and give advice and attention to patients at four pence or sixpence a time as the case may be.

"It is one of the best trainings in the world for a medical man," said one of these sixpenny doctors to the writer, "and the man who undergoes it gains curious and valuable experience. It must not be assumed that the sixpenny doctor, who only treats with the poor, is himself a poor man or one of the outcasts of the profession. His fee may be only sixpence a time, but patients are exceedingly plentiful, and sixpences multiplied sufficiently amount to hundreds of pounds."

"I know of several doctors who must be making nearly $1,000 a year in this way. One of them has had at his surgery as many as 300 patients in a single day. Of course, he himself could not possibly deal with so many, but he had several assistants, to whom he paid three or four guineas a week each. Plucky young doctors at the beginning of their career, anxious for experience and not too particular about appearances, find it pretty to their advantage to accept such situations."

It would surprise both the rich and the poor alike if they knew the double lives that some of these doctors lead. It is the ambition of the sixpenny doctor, when he has earned sufficient money, to go off to some other place and conduct a more fashionable practice, which is often in the long run not quite so remunerative. But at such times he frequently finds it hard to break the spell which the sixpenny practice holds over him.

"I know one case in which a doctor with an excellent reputation and a remunerative practice in the west of London spent several hours each day in running a sixpenny practice in the east. He would go straight from one to the other, and while one of his books might be to hand the head of a navy who had been half-killed in a street fight, at the usual fee of sixpence, the next one would possibly be to attend upon a lady of title and treat her for some romantic ailment, for which a consultation charge of a couple of guineas might be made."

The sixpenny doctor is usually a kind-hearted man, but he has to make it a rule never to attend on any patient, however bad the case may be, unless he gets his sixpenny fee cash down at the time. If he once relaxed his rule his income would soon be reduced to nothing.

One time an old woman ran out of her home to meet the sixpenny doctor on his round, and besought him to go and see her husband, who was ill. She said she had not a penny in the house, but would pay the doctor the next week. He said it could be done,

He glanced through the door and pointed significantly to an ornament on the dresser, remarking at the same time that there was time to pawn something before he came down the street again an hour later. When he did come down the sixpenny was waiting for him, and the old woman had not found it necessary to pawn the ornament, either.

Sometimes, through no fault of his own, the sixpenny doctor gets into some very tight corners. Considering the nature of his practice and the fact that he has often crumpled up quarels, and the dress of the population to attend upon as his clients, it would be strange if he did not.

"Here is one of the most remarkable cases I ever heard of. One night, very late, a sixpenny doctor called on a friend who conducted a good-class but not very remunerative practice and offered to sell him his collection of if he would pay cash. The fact is, he said, I want to clear out at once. I wish to sail from England tomorrow. I will take two hundred, cash down for my practice. If you will pay me within an hour and the receipt last year were four times that amount, as you may see from my books." The men were friends and had no suspicions of each other, so the transaction was completed and the money paid. "On the following morning, the new sixpenny doctor was looking round his fresh quarters for the first time, when a neighbor doctor called in and remarked that it was a pity the newcomer had paid anything at all for the practice."

"Why?" the latter inquired. "Because," was the reply, "your friend would have had to leave the country this morning no matter what happened." "Then he told him that the departed doctor had somehow or other got mixed up in some shady financial transaction. He was really quite blameless in the matter, but the circumstances were such that it was too late to do anything to clear him. As a day to this effect, so, as he had become tired of sixpenny fees and wished to engage in a more adventurous career in the colonies, he chose this moment to beat a hasty retreat."—THE BITS.

Stop That Cough!

When a cough, a tickling or an irritation in the throat makes you feel uncomfortable, take Ballard's Horehound Syrup. Don't wait until the disease has gone beyond control. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. We have used it for several years; it always gives immediate relief, is very pleasant and gives perfect satisfaction." 25c, 50c, $1.00. Sold by Z. C. M. I. Drug Dept.

THEIR BARGAIN.

Mrs. Gunbusta came rushing into the room breathlessly. Throwing her fur auto coat carelessly on a divan and laying her grim grins on the Aeolian, she gasped: "Oh, Fred, I bought a handsome machine this morning for only $75." "Bully for you!" shouted Gunbusta, joyously, laying down the Motor magazine he had been busily engaged in reading when his wife entered.

"But," she stammered, "in my anxiety to hurry home in it and tell you of my wonderful bargain I was horrified to discover several times for exceeding the speed limit and it cost me $300 for fine and!"

"Never mind that, dearest; it's cheap even at those figures." "And then I had to pay $200 to merchants for goods of their that I ran into and ruined, and!"

"What of it?" interrupted Gunbusta, "Eight hundred and seventy-five dollars is cheap for a good car!"

"And—er—and I gave $500 to people I had run down and who threatened lawsuits, and all because I was desirous of hurrying home to tell you of my wonderful bargain!"

But before Mrs. Gunbusta had completed the sentence her husband rushed into the back yard and tried to run over himself with his automobile.
