THE FIRST OF THE VELVET STREET GOWNS

The reign of velvets and velvetene that was interrupted only by the hot weather will be resumed with the first cool days of fall. The new designs are a long way removed from their predecessors, being more frilly and fluffy. The chiffon velvetene in black is cleverly strapped with pale-blue cloth braid in black, white and silver soutache. This strapping edges the fichu effect over the shoulders, makes the cuff, and appears in the skirt, which is plain and circular in cut. Fitting closely over the hips the width at the hem is at least eight yards, and is cleverly sustained with the insert of princess haircloth that gives such a swaggy outline with not a hint of stiffness.

like the libraries, is free to the public. The Forestry committee took for its practical work this year the observance of Arbor Day. Every public city, or county school observed the day. In Salt Lake City alone over four hundred shrubs and trees were given to the public schools for planting on school grounds by the Forestry committee.

The Legislative committee is made up of one member of each standing committee, and looks after all legislative work outlined by the Federation or by the individual clubs. It especially concerns itself with educational and industrial measures, and investigates all proposed legislation relating to women and children.

The rebuke of Count von Heesens, which, the well-known political writer, to the International Congress of Women in Berlin, did not impress them as deeply as he intended. It is reported that many of the women merely laughed. The Count said the women should have refused social courtesies from Chancellor and Countess von Bulow and Secretary and Countess von Posadowsky-Wehner. Immediately after the Government has rejected the woman-suffrage amendment to the law creating boards or arbitration for merchants and their employees. The secretary of the interior snubbed the suffrage movement, but gave you strawberries and cream," scornfully exclaimed the Count.

The women might have answered: "Bless your heart, Count, that is what women have been accustomed to since the flood. They eat the strawberries and cream and go right on trying for the other things." If women refused social courtesies from men who disbelieve in higher education, woman suffrage, and other rights, what would become of society? Besides, it wouldn't have converted anybody. Helene Lange was quite right when she replied that it was only by meeting the enemy socially that they have chances to explain their views.

The new American church in Berlin was packed to the doors to hear the Rev. Anna Shaw, Susan B. Anthony, and Carrie Chapman Catt. The American Diplomatic Corps was represented, and many members of the American colony were present. Susan B. Anthony, Mrs. Catt, and Charlotte Perkins Gilman are among the most popular delegates at the congress. Miss Anthony was especially honored by the empress, who has suggested a doubt concerning her exclusive devotion to the "three K's" advocated by her Emperor for women. The Empress has shown marked interest in the proceeding of the congress, and was very friendly to the delegates presented to her.

Berlin has an American Woman's Club, with Mrs. Charlemagne Tower as president. The club was formed in 1903, and is a continuation of an American Girl's Club. For several good reasons it was resolved to close on the latter, and the new club was organized with Mrs. Andrew D. White as first president. Most of the American women in Berlin are there for study, and this fact gives an idea of the prestige the club enjoys. There are many musical members. Mrs. John D. Rockefeller and Miss Tillie Spooner gave the first money for the fitting up of the rooms, which are now very comfortable and tastefully arranged. Entertainments are frequent, ten is served on Saturday afternoons, and on the last Saturday of the month a large reception is held, when guest privileges are extended to friends of the members.

The New Orleans woman of society is not much of a club woman, except as regards literary clubs. Southern people generally have not been celebrated for their intellectuality; but there has been a sort of literary awakening here during the past fifteen or twenty years, and the papers read at some of the clubs show that serious study is done. There were weird stories told about the infancy of one of these exoties in year ago. The leaders knew their way about among the labyrinths of literature, but some of the followers went sadly astray. One lady, during a course of Shakespearean study, was heard to complain that there was nothing "cute" about "Timon of Athens," and another confused Thomas a Kempis with Thomas Aquinas. But they know better now.—Annals for October.

Club women throughout the State will be interested in learning that the Inter-Mountain Magazine has been made the official organ of the Utah Federation of Women's clubs. The first number in which the club news of the federation appears was that of September, which is an especially attractive issue. The October number of the magazine is devoted to the annual convention of the federation, to be held at Logan.
