Another Despatch.

CHICAGO, 12—M'Nell Josephat, who ran a small deposit bank at 164 Randolph Street, has left the city, leaving the bank insolvent, and to-day it was placed in the hands of the receivers. The total assets were provisionally estimated at from $13,000 to $50,000, with assets not over $5,000.

Arrest of a Slave Destroyer.

When the train on the Illinois Central arrived this evening, an colored slave, a depositary of Mr. Brown, who, according to the story of the conductor and passengers, had, without provocation, thrown the car windows during the trip, two of the Bibles placed in the racks by religious societies. He was admitted to ball and the case will be heard to-morrow.

Hayden's Exploring Expedition.

The Journal's Washington letter, just received here, speaks of the safety and success of most of the parties composing Prof. Hayden's exploring expedition. The party under charge of Prof. C. A. Gould, having reached the City of Salt Lake, having carefully explored the country from Denver across the main ranges of the Rocky and Wasatch Mountains to that point. Professor White states that his investigations have resulted in the discovery of some most important phenomena which will form an interesting scientific contribution to the knowledge of the geology and paleontology of a long stretch of comparatively little-known part of the west. Information from other divisions of the survey indicate that the valuable character of the entire region explored this year, when made known, will attract the attention of the public generally. The parties will all return to Washington by the 1st of October.

Arrest of Counterfeiter.

BALTIMORE, 12—Two men giving the names of William E. Nelson and John Have are arrested on suspicion of being confidence operators and dealers in counterfeit bonds and checks to a large amount, and a lot of bogus gold twenty-dollar pieces. Prof. Hale weighed well engraved counterfeit thousand dollar United States gold coupon bonds and two checks on San Francisco bank, and a check on the Meridian bank of Indianapolis, for $2,500, payable to William H. Brooks, and signed by G. E. Manning & Co.

DETROIT, O., 12—Early in the day thousands of people gathered near Mr. Anderson's, where the President is stopping. At 8.30 the military marched to the house, took the President under escort and proceeded to the Statehouse, where a salute of twenty-one guns was fired as a welcome. The grand review and inspection of 3,000 veterans then took place, and after an address of welcome by Colonel Brown, governor of the Home, Gen. B. F. Butler, president of the board of managers, delivered an address congratulating his comrades on the improvements in the grounds and the addition made for the comfort of the nation's defenders. He paid a stirring tribute to their loyalty to the Union in which the public showed its approbation theret.

His address was solely given to matters of interest to the board and the Home. In concluding he said: I have the honor to present to you the President of the United States, a distinguished citizen of this state now at the head of government, in the world, who leaves his duty to come here and show his regard for his old comrades, some of whom he recognized and for all of whom he feels the love of a soldier for another fellow soldier. The President of the United States (prolonged cheering) followed. Comrades, follow citizens! The greeting I know is not a personal compliment. This large assemblage of disabled veterans of the volunteer army of the Union and of citizens who sympathize with them, manifest by this well come their respect for the office which, for the time being, has devolved upon me, and their patriotic attachment to the government of the United States. These men have served and served nobly to the best of their ability, and submitted to many hardships and privations. Their services and sacrifices will always be remembered with affection and gratitude, and good men and women will pray that the supreme ruler of the universe will forever have them one and all in his special care and keeping.

A FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE'S FRIEND—Gen. Butler introduced Secretary of War McCrary, who said: Veterans, soldiers, I know not how to express the feelings which are excited as I stand for the first time in the presence of more than 2,000 disabled soldiers of the regiments of the Union, and I fear I shall not be able to say what I feel. We are told that from the abundance of the heart the mouth speaks, but I think there is an exception to that on account of the fact that from the abundance of the heart the mouth will not speak at all. I cannot address you as your President has done as comrades, for I do not have the honor to share with you in the services, sacrifices and sufferings incident to your career in the army, and by which you confer incomparable glory upon yourselves and your country.
