

UTAH AS IT IS.

Address by Professor Talmage, at Provo, July 24, 1887.

I esteem it as a significant honor to be permitted to speak upon the subject that has been announced. I believe that a study of the various stages through which a country passes in the course of its development can never fail to be of interest and importance to the thoughtful mind. The multiple changes which such a country experiences are as varied, as wonderful, and as awe-inspiring as the mystical metamorphoses which are undergone by the latent seed, as it awakens from its sleep of winters. Do but examine it a minute with a careful eye and a tender hand, and you will find stored within the narrow limits of its tiny envelope, a germ quivering beneath the living touch of the great Lord of Life, and possessing within itself the possibility of development even to perfection; aye, and of continual increase. Yet to the careless and unobserving such seed is of but little promise, but in the proper season, forth it springs in the renewed, every fiber palpitating with the living force within. Ere long the seed becomes a tree, laden with blossoms of beauty, flowers of fragrance, fruit of usefulness and plenty, and withal, a foliage of spreading branches and verdant leaves, under which bird, and beast, and man delight to seek shelter and protection. Such a seed with its aspect of barrenness and sterility to the untrained mind, but with the promise of infinite development to the eye adjusted to perceive such, was Utah, forty years ago, and such a tree, offering its abundance of fruit, and flower, and protection and shelter to all who seek these germs in purity and faith, is Utah of to-day.

To-day I walk abroad in the land and behold thrifty towns and well ordered villages in place of the Indian camp and the savage's wickiup; the herds of the boy's song and the milk-maid's ditty are heard instead of the the wondrous axe and the miner's pick have supplanted the tomahawk; the bear and the wolf, forgetting their hostile and carnivorous nature, have fled before our horses and cattle to the most inaccessible heights of these sentinel hills. In place of the deadly rattle of the venomous reptile, my ear catches the hum of bees and the bleating of sheep. The vulture's shriek and the raven's croak are silenced by the merry crowing of the chauticleer and the chirping and cooing of our birds of civilization.

Besides these, I hear other sounds, which seem to have had no representation in our earlier history; they are rather additions than substitutions. Listen to the merry treble of a thousand looms and spindles, chording with the deep and soul-stirring bass voices of these horses that feed on fire and steam, with hoots of iron and ribs of steel, rushing through our land with their treasures of food and dress, of coal and rock and metal, and of freight far more precious than all such—traveling as was seen in the prophetic vision of one of old and blessing as they come." And to this wondrous melody, thousands of our hearty artisans and sturdy tillers of the soil, beat true, perfect and powerful time with sledge, and axe, chisel and mallet, with hoe and with prong; and chiming with all, imparting a sweetness which otherwise would be unimaginable, I hear the voices of children at school, of students and their teachers at prayers. But at times as I sit entranced in the contemplation of such majestic melody, of such holy harmony of blessed and favored progress, my eye is smitten by the faintest intimation of ill-timed note, that savors of a discord, and I know that there are some in the choir, few though they may be, some too that claim Utah as their foster mother, who would fain throw confusion into that glad song, yet the sound is so weak as to hardly influence the

"WITH SPEED SWIFTLY

of the whole. These would-be disturbers give but variety to the symphony; and cause the truer performers to sing the lustier and play the heartier to drown such tuneless and discordant efforts in a sea of the sweetest song. But our Utah's beauties appeal to other senses than that of hearing alone. Were I an artist, I would spare no pains to make my canvas speak to you of "Utah as it is" to me. But as I am not, permit me to summon to my aid some master of the pencil and brush and in your hearing I will give my instructions: Good Mr. Painter, draw me a picture of a lovely valley walled by mountains high and strong, with an aspect threatening to the fearful, but assuring to the hopeful. Let the open months of mines of wealth and treasure be seen upon the hills. In the valley there must be a lovely lake, fed by crystal streams, which sparkle as they flow through the land, as when the sun-light falls aslant on the silvery locks of age. Let there be fields speaking fertility by their fulness; likewise orchards and vineyards, of

RICHNESS AND PLENTY.

And in the distance, show the spires and turrets, chimneys and roofs, of a thrifty and busy town. And now, as this is an age of symbolism, of mystic representation and of visible parables, let us seek a fitting symbol of the prevailing spirit of Utah and Utah's people to-day. What can be more appropriate than the figure of a stately, pure, lovely, or let me say lovable woman. So let it be; and sir, draw in the foreground of my picture a female form of perfection. Let the face be natural and character speaking; and I pray you avoid with the strictest care, that smirk of fashion, that affectations smile, that hollow mockery of expression, which seems to be oftener mistaken for beauty. The lineaments of the countenance must bespeak fervor and modesty; thankfulness for the past, and trust for the future, and unfaltering reliance on the voice of and an unswerving trust in the goodness of one common Father. Let the eyes be lustrous and bright, indicative of purity in thought and action; the dress must be simple and graceful, and withal, the workmanship of her own hands.

And now there is a feature in our picture, which I would gladly neglect, but the completeness of the symbolism would be marred thereby. So draw for me, peering out from the shady covert of shrub and tree, of vine and fig, with wanton eyes fixed on the fair maid, the semblance of a man. The countenance bespeaks greed and avarice, a licentious desire, and libertine propensities. The expression reveals the thoughts of the heart, which are these: "Surely she shall finally fall a victim to my arts and intrigues; she must be humiliated and defiled."

Such is my picture of the present condition of our land and its people. Men of Utah, this is

NO TIME FOR SLOTH;

let us be awake to the possibilities of our surroundings; and may we never forget that the Utah of the future is to be the child of "Utah as it is."

FATAL DUEL.

Killed in a Quarrel Over a Fence in Colorado.

Two men in a lonely mountain pass fought a duel on Thursday morning, July 21, that resulted in the death of one of them and miraculous escape of the other. Sheltered by trees, these men—Victor Sanchez and C. A. Moody—both ranchmen, watched and waited for an opportunity to slay each other, and finally it came. Sanchez ventured too far from shelter to get a good chance at his enemy and was killed just as he himself fired. The bullet from his revolver tore its way into the trunk of the tree that concealed Moody and missed the latter's head by only a few inches.

The killing occurred in the isolated section of Conejos County, about seventeen miles from the county seat, and caused great excitement. The tragedy was surrounded by considerable mystery at first, and several men were suspected of it. All suspicion was quieted, however, by the admission of C. A. Moody, a ranchman living in the locality, that he had killed Sanchez in self-defense. A coroner's inquest was held and a great deal of testimony taken. The jury returned a verdict on Friday afternoon that Sanchez had died from injuries inflicted by a shotgun in the hands of Moody, in self-defense. Moody was then released.

Moody and Sanchez, who are both men of families, have adjoining ranches. That of Moody is surrounded by a substantial fence, and is about the only one in the section thus improved. Sanchez, it appears, had complained about the fence intruding on his property. About a week ago he went to the fence adjoining his ranch and cut a part of it down, taking it away to his own place, and cutting it up into posts.

Moody detected the act the next day and went in search of Sanchez, and met him driving up one of the cañons near his ranch. Moody asked Sanchez why he had cut the fence down, and received in reply a string of Mexican epithets and a denial. Moody told him that he knew that he had done the act, and said that he was going to make him pay for it.

With this Sanchez sprang down from the wagon, drawing his revolver.

Moody and William Spencer, who accompanied him, immediately sprang to cover, and when Sanchez had reached the ground the two men were behind a tree and Moody was cocking his shot gun.

Sanchez immediately discovered his peril and sprang behind a tree, leaving the wagon and horses standing in an open space. By the time that he had put the tree between himself and the two men, Moody had his gun pointed towards the tree and Sanchez had to crouch down in order to conceal the whole of his body. While stooping in this position Moody showed himself and Sanchez leaned forward in order to get a good shot at him. He pushed the undergrowth aside and peered around the trunk, raising his revolver.

The movement was fatal. Moody saw his opportunity and raised his gun. Both men fired at once. The bullet from Sanchez's revolver missed Moody's head by only a few inches. The contents of Moody's gun struck Sanchez full in the face and killed him. When Moody and Spencer ventured out from their retreat they found the lifeless body of the Mexican stretched full length on the stubble, his revolver lying under him. They lifted the body into the wagon and drove back to Sanchez' ranch, leaving it with his widow and two small children. Then they reported the matter at Conejos and stated the circumstances. They were arrested and an inquest held, but released as stated.

Sanchez was about 35 years of age and quite prominent in the county. He leaves a wife and three children.—Denver News.

TERRITORIAL ITEMS.

CULLED FROM LATEST EXCHANGES.

—The hotel at Norris Geyser Basin, National Park, burned one night last week. Insurance small.

—The Walkerville (Montana) base ball club has accepted the challenge of the Helena base ball club to play a match for $500 a side. The game will be played on the grounds of the West Side Fair and Racing Association, on Sunday, July 31.

—The rails for the Butte street railway have been shipped from Johnstown, Pa., and are now on the road to Butte. Engineer Bean is expected to arrive in a few days. The company will then begin active work and Butte will have a system of electric railway in much less time than is generally expected.

—Parties in Butte continue to receive excellent reports from the mines near Elliston, on the Little Blackfoot. A letter was seen which stated that Conner & Co. have refused $100,000 cash and a like amount in stock for their mine near there. Some Helena capitalists were there last week, but what they did is as yet a secret.

—Among the many improvements to be made in Caldwell, Idaho, this season are a two-story brick business block, to be built by the Odd Fellows at a cost of $7,000; a new two-story brick schoolhouse at a cost of $7,000; two new churches at a probable cost of $5,000 and several private residences. Caldwell is expected to more than double her present population in the next year.

—The N. P. Railroad Company are building a large brick machine shop and round house combined at Missoula, Montana. This is one of the principal improvements, so far as building is concerned, on the entire length of the road this year. It is an important enterprise for the town and will add not a little to its prosperity. Two of the old round houses will be converted into a large shop for repairing cars. The railroad company have also built large stock yards just west of the town limits.

—Mike Eagan, of Virginia City, Nevada, who has lately come to Butte, tells a pathetic story of the great Comstock disaster. Among the imprisoned men was the only son and support of Mother Jeffries, who lived on the divide above the mine. She had such firm faith that her boy would be taken out alive that she prepared him a bowl of soup and dived down to the mouth of the shaft and waited for him until the soup would cool, then she would climb back up the hill and brew some more and return. This she repeated for eight days, when, completely exhausted, she was restrained by friends from further exertions. The poor old mother is now on her death-bed and will soon follow her beloved boy.

WALTER H. ATWOOD, of Cottonwood, who had both his legs broken by a forty-foot fall, a few weeks ago, is recovering from his injuries. He will probably be able to have his leg removed from the box in which it has been kept bandaged, to keep it in position in a few days, but will not be able to leave his room for some time yet.

DIPHTHERIA.

"I am living in a neighborhood surrounded with Diphtheria, and was attacked with Ulcerated Sore Throat. I at once commenced to use Darby's Prophylactic Fluid, diluted about one half, as a gargle, when great clots of hard membrane and mucous came from my throat, and the attack passed off. I am satisfied of its efficacy as a preventive and cure for Diphtheria."—W. P. WOODWARD, Frankford, Pa.

SUMMONS.

In the District Court, of the First Judicial District of the Territory of Utah, Utah County.

W. H. Farrar, Plaintiff, vs. Martha P. Farrar, Defendant.

The people of the Territory of Utah, send greeting:

To Martha P. Farrar, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED TO appear in action brought against you by the above named plaintiff, in the District Court of the First Judicial District of the Territory of Utah, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons—if served within this county; or, if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days, otherwise within forty days—or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of said complaint.

The said action is brought to obtain from this Court a judgment that the bonds of matrimony now existing between you and plaintiff be dissolved, and that the custody of the minor child, the issue of said marriage, be awarded to said plaintiff, and for general relief.

"For fuller particulars reference is hereby made to the complaint on file herein."

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear, and answer the said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness the Hon. H. P. Henderson, Judge, and the seal of the District Court of the First Judicial District, in and for the Territory of Utah, this fourteenth day of June, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven.

SUMMONS.

In the District Court in and for the Third Judicial District of Utah Territory, County of Salt Lake.

Catherine Schoenhals, Plaintiff, vs. Edmond Schoenhals, Defendant.

The people of the Territory of Utah, send greeting:

To Edmond Schoenhals, Defendant,

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED TO appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the Territory of Utah, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons—if served within this county; or, if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days; otherwise within forty days—or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of said complaint.

The said action is brought to have a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony existing between plaintiff and defendant, and awarding to plaintiff the care and custody of the minor children, the issue of said marriage, and setting aside to plaintiff such portion of the common property as may seem just, and that defendant be required to pay into court a reasonable sum to defray the expenses of this action and for counsel fees, and that he pay to plaintiff such further sum for alimony as to this Court may seem just for her support during the pendency of this action and for general relief. The above relief is prayed upon the ground that defendant committed adultery with one Eliza Keeler, on or about October 15th, 1885, and on divers other days and times, and has also failed to provide plaintiff a support, having the ability so to do.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness, the Hon. Charles S. Zane, Judge, and the Seal of the District Court of the Third Judicial District, in and for the Territory of Utah, this 15th day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand, eight hundred and eighty-seven.
