

A Rash Promise.

WHAT THE RISE IN NAILS COST A WEALTHY MERCHANT.

A pretty good story in connection with the recent rise in nails, is told at the expense of a prominent hardware merchant in a neighboring city. The gentleman aforesaid is a bachelor, and has several pretty cousins residing in this city. The young ladies are, of course, very fond of their relative, and he returns the cousinly affection. When nails were worth $1.70 per keg, he invested his spare funds in about 7,000 kegs, and held them for a rise. He promised his cousins that when the price reached $4 per keg, he would buy each of them a silk dress. That figure was reached, and the young ladies, of course, expected him to fulfil his promise, and had compared notes as to the exact shade which would suit their peculiar style of beauty; but our friend saw a way out of the difficulty, as he thought, and persuaded the girls to wait until nails reached $5 per keg, when he would present each of them with a seal-skin sacque.

His idea was that probably no such figure would be paid, and in that way he would exchange a certainty for an uncertainty. But nails kept going until they were quoted at $5. Another appeal for the fulfillment of the promise brought out a suggestion that if the importunate damsels would possess their souls in patience until nails were quoted a $6 per keg, they should each receive a set of diamonds. The proposition was accepted and the shrewd fellow thought that he had got out of the scrape pretty easily. He was doomed, however, to pay the penalty of his rash promise, as it is said that nails were quoted at $6 within the last two days. It will be vain for the unfortunate victim of a combination of good and bad luck to avoid paying his promised reward for the remarkable patience and self-control which has been exercised by his fair cousins. The young ladies will be the envy of all their friends when those diamonds come.—Rochester Herald.
