After three days of close personal contact with William Jennings Bryan. styled amidst great applause at the Alta club Saturday afternoon, as "the greatest private citizen in America," the people of Utah have passed him on to a sister state to the northeast, where he begins a series of lectures tonight. At his final public appearance in Salt Lake Saturday afternoon Mr. Bryan had a free opportunity to expound some of his favorite theories of government, for he was there as the guest of his party organization, surrounded by prominent adherents of different partles and creeds, all laying aside their differences for an hour to hear a great thinker tell of American principles

For political quarters the said that for political quarters he said that for the future the competition between parties is to see which can discern the iruth most clearly, grasp it most firm-ly, and follow it most courageously. His whole speech was an appeal for less worship of money, and more valor for principle in politics. He expressed great satisfaction that party fences are lower than they used to be and that consequently it is easier for good people to jump over.

A LESSON FROM ENGLAND.

"I want," he said, "to draw one lesson from England. It impressed me when I was there three years ago. It is this, that in Great Britain the successful business men place a limit to their accumulations and when they have accumulations and when they have gathered together enough money to keep them in comfort they stop making money and they devote them-selves to public affairs, and all over Great Britain you will find men of means who are serving without com-pensation in city councils, in public places, and are giving their time to the public the public.

"I believe it has been a fault in this country that our money makers have gone on making money to the very verge of the grave. That the minds that have been drawn into business that have been drawn into business have been devoted entirely to busi-ness and society has not felt the benefit which it ought to have from these people. When I insist that business men should take more interest in politics I do it notwith-standing the fact that we do take business in politics. business in politics.

IT'S UP TO THE PEOPLE.

"Now my friends we live in a coun-try where the government will be good when the people make it good, and where the government will be bad if the people permit it to be bad. I think that is applicable to us only I question whether there are any worse citizens than those who take no part in politics. I think it is questionable whether, in this country, we have any worse citi-zens than those who don't appreciate citizenship enough to make their opin-ions felt for good government. And if this government fails in this nation it will not be because of corruption at the "Now my friends we live in a counwill not be because of corruption at the bottom, it will be because of indiffer-ence at the top. wealth, if he gets it honestly, all the wealth that he can have, provided he owns the money. But when a man gets so much money that the money owns him, he has more than he ought to him, he has more than he ought to have. "Most of those who boast that they are independently rich are dependently rich. They have surrounded themselves with so many people upon whose labor they live that they can not live with-out the help of them, and they grow more and more dependent. "Now, in the early days there were two great statesmen, Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton. And I want the Republicans who grace this table and Alexander Hamilton. And I want the Republicans who grace this table to bear with me while I point out that the ideas of Jefferson have grown and the ideas of Hamilton have failed. These two men represented opposite extremes. They both thought, but they thought differently. They both felt deeply but they did not feel alks. Jef-ferson trusted the people. Hamilton distrusted them." JEFFERSON AND HAMILTON.

Mr. Bryan, in following up the par-allel between Jefferson and Hamilton allel between Jefferson and Hamilton reforred to the present system of elect-ing senators as Hamiltonian, and de-clared it should be abandoned in favor of the direct election, since direct elec-tion was the desire of 95 per cent of the people.

He also denounced the monopoly and He also denounced the monopoly and the trust as being against the Jef-fersonian theory, and said that the man who excused the trust on the ground that it was a natural economy development was the best friend of the socialist. Roosevelt's "inheritance tax" was indorsed, but it was declared to be a temporary measure, with the perma-nent solution of the trouble lying more nent solution of the trouble lying more deeply down in the enforcement of the principle "thou shalt not steal." Today Mr. Bryan is in Laramie, where he lectures tonight. He left Ogden Sunday morning, after lecturing there Saturday evening.

"My attention was drawn to Jefferson "My attention was drawn to Jefferson by a criticism made upon myself last fall. Senator Beveridge came to our city and delivered a speech to the Re-publican club, and in the course of that speech he called me a dreamer, and as his speech was published in the paper there I had a chance to read it. I didn't pay much attention to it, but soon after that I read a speech made by Gov. Cummins in Wisconsin, and he called me a dreamer. And then I sat up and took notice. In a little while I read a speech made by Mr. Cannon, the speak-er, and he called me a dreamer, and it looked like it was going to be serious. er, and he called me a dreamer, and it looked like it was going to be serious. Then in a few days Gov. Hanly called me a dreamer. Then I had the admis-sion of four prominent Republicans. Knowing that my word would be of lit-tle value amidst such testimony I de-cided instead of making a defense, to just plead guilty and justify it. I be-gan to look up the subject of dreams and I found it was not such a bad thing after all to be a dreamer. It was rath-er a compliment than otherwise. "Thomas Jefferson deserves more than any other man in our history to be called a dreamer and his dreams are constantly being materialized. DUTY OF SCHOLARS.

DUTY OF SCHOLARS.

"It is true today that the scholar in this country are not doing their duty. They ought to look ahead and see the dangers, and they ought to warn the public of the dangers that are coming, but yet they do not do it. President Roosevelt made a speech to some Harvard graduates and he pointare coming, but yet they do not do it. President Roosevelt made a speech to some Harvard graduates and he point-ed out this very thing. He said there was not a great scheme of spollation in this country that was not defended by Harvard graduates. Our public men in-stead of training their trained minds to the service of the people are too often trained over against the welfare of the public. I think at this time the example of Jefferson comes to us as an inspiration, and we can hold him up to the learned men of today and ask them to immitate him in hot al-lowing their education to wean them away from the mass of the people. "Today we find greater fortunes in single hands than the world has ever known before. The rapidity with which fortunes have been accumulated in the country is amazed us all. It is un-paralleled in history. And because many of these great fortunes have been accumulated by immoral means the people who have accumulated them have become so perverted that they take a distorted view of society, of government and even religion. As TO SWOLLEN FORTUNES.

AS TO SWOLLEN FORTUNES.

AS TO SWOLLEN FORTUNES. "My friends, there would be no an-tagonism between the rich and the poor lif the rich men of today felt as Jefferson felt, and he was a rich man for his time. What we need in this world is sympathy. Sympathy. It is the bond that must bind people together, and when a man becomes so rich that he ceases to have sympathy for the poor he is richer than anyone ought to be. You ask me how much money a man eught to have. I don't know, I would not assume to fix a limit to what a man might hold. In the first place I would say that no man ought to have money beyond what he gives service for in return. I say that a man ought to have from society a reward for all he can do for societ. My friends. I am going to hay down what I regard as a sound principle in regard to the amount of wealth that a man can have. A man can have all the

The entertain-ment will consist of a curtain-raiser entitled "A Search for a Magistrate." followed by a two-act comedy entitled "Mr. Bob." The production will be un-der the direction of Mr. Alvin Peterson, an alumnus of the university, who has had a great deal of experience in the histrionic line under the instruction of Miss Maud May Babcock, who for-merly directed these annual theatricals, but whose absence in the east makes it impossible for her to do so this season. It is proposed to make a tour of the state prior to the metropolitan appear-ance of the club. Those who will com-pose the cast in the two plays are as follows: Will P. Mifflin, Edna Harker, Richard Young, Leo Marshall, Richard Hart, Ivy Cleghorn, Nellie Mayhan, Kate McMannis and Hazel Barnes. irst class cast. The final try-out

LOAN FUND AT U. OF U.

Plan for Assisting Worthy Students Adopted by Scholarship Committee.

A plan for assisting worthy students in need has been adopted by the scholarship ommittee of the State University, in refcommittee of the State University, in ref-erence to the Lucy Stringham Grant fund. The fund consists of a donation of 10 shares of stock of the Heber J. Grant company, valued at $1,000, and was contributed in memory of Mrs. Lucy Grant, who was an alumus of the Uni-versity. In the bequest it was provided that only the income from the stock should be available, which amounts to about $50 per annum. In the year 1963-04, the money was given to William D. Taylor, but last year the money was not used, and at the present time about $100 re-mains in the hands of the committee for disposition. After consultation with all interested, it was decided to use the money as a loan fund to students with-out interest. Applicants who in the opti-tion of the committee are worthy will be allowed $50 per year from this fund, with a maximum allowance of $200 in four years. After leaving the institution the student will be given one year in which to make his first payment in return of the amount, the balance to be paid as soon as possible. In this way the money will increase from year to year, enabling others to secure an education in the same way. The committee adopted this plan in the hope that others who are able might contribute to this fund, to assist worthy young paople in their desires to acquire an education. rence to the Lucy Stringham Grant
