

TELEGRAPHIC. DEMOCRATS DIVIDED.

Held a dozen Candidates in the Field for Governor of Ohio.

A LIVELY FIGHT EXPECTED.

The Platform Committee Said to Up-hold the Country's Policy.—No Silver Plank.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—Will the Democracy of Ohio stand by President Cleveland or the platform he will be elected? That is the question to be solved within the next thirty hours and there is no man in or out of Ohio who can predict the result with entire accuracy. Half a dozen candidates for governor are in the field. Neal, who framed the tariff plank in the last Democratic national platform and who is a rail road silver coinage man, is in the lead. Neal has declared that he will abide by the Cleveland platform in his efforts to capture them all. He is likely to take them all and kill them before they reach home.

The country is torn.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—The report that the Democratic national delegation of Cedar County had been shot at is absurd. The difficulties are beginning to present an alarming appearance, and the entire country is in arms.

Meetings with Authors.

New York, Aug. 9.—The report that the Democratic national delegation of Cedar County had been shot at is absurd. The difficulties are beginning to present an alarming appearance, and the entire country is in arms.

A Line of Failure.

An old Bank Institution Closes Its Doors.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 9.—The First National Bank of this city, the largest bank in the state of Tennessee, closed its doors this afternoon.

The capital is $1,000,000 and deposits $1,000,000 surplus and undivided profits $1,000,000.

The directors of the City Savings have decided to close the bank and close it to account payment for sixty days. The bank is insolvent solvent.

RECEIVED AND APPROVED.

New York, Aug. 9.—William J. R. Webb, a representative of the Hamlin & Tracy firm, arrived yesterday at 159 Broadway. Today, S. W. Copley was appointed at Denver, Colo., a few days ago receiver of the property of the company in the Northwest, it having closed at Kenosha, N. W., Milwaukee, Green Bay, Neenah and Menasha, Wash. The company was organized in March, 1887, to make loans on farm mortgages and grain leases. The company has closed. It is said over $100,000 in western farms has been paid in capital of stock.

A complete change of front by the platform committee is coming in view.

With additional contributions adjoined, having referred the formation of the platform to a sub-committee of six, which will report tomorrow morning. There will be no silver plank in the platform and Cleveland's policy will be upheld.

Washington Notes.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Speaker Clegg did not come to the Capital today, but remained at home devoting the day to the formation of the House committee. Clegg says two or three weeks longer before the bill will be presented for the opening of the Chinese strip are still suspended.

With Minister Bienville had way to San Francisco, the master of diplomatic ceremony, and others will be sent him to remain in Honolulu after the departure of the Boston, and tranship his flag to the vessel used to remove him.

Upon inquiry at the pension office it learned that up to date there have been 947 pensioners suspended which were granted under the act of June 25, 1890, the average being 175 daily.

In response to the continual representations from Cleveland and many laymen were interested in the camp at Appleton, Wis., Colored Leavenworth, and others will be sent him to remain in Honolulu after the departure of the Boston, and tranship his flag to the vessel used to remove him.

SENATOR JONES'S RETIREMENT.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Aug. 9.—A deputation states that the mother of Senator Jones of Nevada, died at Jones's residence at Santa Monica, this afternoon.

ADMIRAL JONES.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Hear-Admiral Thornton A. Jenkins died at his residence in this city, at half past twelve at 725 bright, aged 80 years.

NEWS FROM FOREIGN LANDS.

LONDON Press Comments on the President's Message.

The Colonies Raging Abroad.—The House Hates ROI and the Paved-House—The Socialists.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—The Daily News says: In fairness of time and unceasing thoroughness of policy Cleveland's message will only now receive the attention it deserves. The Colonies and Hallows arguments are practically answered from the other side of the Atlantic. The President lets the fancies down easily suggesting that although, perhaps, larger powers than himself will be compelled under the imperial parliament without power to control taxation or develop the national interest, coupled with a reduction of the number of Irish representatives in the imperial parliament, render the bill impossible of acceptance by the Irish people.

which cannot be considered, in connection with an infinite subdivision of bartered silver, always decreasing in value, for comparatively simple and valuable, has all transactions of which result in loss.

Therefore we do not expect the bimetallic system will be maintained, but it will be maintained at a low level and that it is impossible to maintain the gold standard system long enough to allow the value of the coin to increase.

The value of the coin will be increased by the amount of the coin itself, but it will be increased largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again.

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again."

The Daily Telegraph says: "The President's message is a very startling document and goes straight to the root of the principal or strongest existing difficulty in the country." The author of the message is also quoted as saying:

"We have no right to tax the people to support a system which has been adopted largely to the anti-slavery party, but the best remedy to be explained why a community which has had experience of the practical effect of the metallic appreciation of silver, desire to have the same again