treated, so passed by," she confessed. And her only solace was to hurry through the fortnight of her tour and get off again to the races—absolutely unaccompanied. Mrs. Langtry's daughter, Jeanne, who has always been musical, has now just published a delightful little song called "The Rose."

Violet Wood, who is to wed the younger de Batho, once wanted to marry an English officer named Lethbridge, and to stop this her mother promptly made her a card in chancery; the court not only taking charge of the girl's money but the girl herself. So guarded, in fact, were her finances that when she and her sister wished to give a dance they had to apply to the court of chancery for the money to pay for it.

COVETED MARK OF DISTINCTION.

It is a coveted mark of distinction among our feminine aristocracy to be pre-eminent in the display of some variety of gems. The Duchess of Roxburgh stands easily first in the matter of turquoises, which are peculiarly adapted to her type of beauty. The great bulk of them were collected before her marriage while she was still Miss May Goelet. Buying here and there and always displaying excellent judgment in their purchase, she had acquired no less than a hundred brooches, pendants, earrings and bracelets studded with these precious stones. They were broken up after her marriage and she now wears them in the form of a superb "plut au con." To complete this ornament, in accordance with her design, a few turquoises had to be added to those she had already obtained. But it took months to procure them, and she was obliged to wait for them, because her own maiden collection consisted of absolutely faultless stones, perfectly matched in color, and she would be content with none that did not conform to the same high standard.

MRS. BONYNGE'S RESIDENCE.

Next season will find Mrs. Bonyng, mother of Viscountess Desherburn, fixed up in a London residence which she will occupy for the greater part of the year. Since her recent arrival in London she has been exploring Mayfair and Belgrave for a suitable home. In both localities there are a considerable number of houses to let just now so that it is easy enough to get a real good establishment at a very moderate rental. Money is so scarce that a number of people are letting their town houses and are moving into flats. Thus report the fashionable real estate agents.

Mrs. Bonyng has just made an offer for a house in Chesterfield Gardens, a few doors away from Mrs. Bradley Martin and Lady Craven. She has her eye also on a magnificent residence in Grosvenor Gardens in Belgrave, but as Chesterfield Gardens is more in the heart of the American colony it is believed she will make it her choice. She is at present staying with her daughter at the latter's country house in Essex, and is making herself most agreeable to all around her. She visits the local schools and distributes quantities of chocolate and toys to the younger children. On market days she goes into the towns of Chelmsford and Romford and takes a keen interest in all that is going on, especially in the sale and purchase of agricultural produce.

Mrs. Bonyng visited Lady Warwick's training home for young women at Dunmow and was highly pleased with the provision that had been made for turning out these women as fit and competent housekeepers. She expressed a hope that Lady Desherburn might one day be able to direct a similar institution. This bustling American matron has seen more of Essex during the few weeks she has been there than her daughter has been able to do in the years she has been in England. Mrs. Bonyng has motored to all the places of interest in the county, including Chelmsford Lunatic asylum, which is supposed to be the most perfect institution of its kind in Europe. She has seen Dr. Barnardo's home at Barking, and Gen. Booth's farm for the submerged tenth at Hadleigh. She went on to Osea Island, where the ex-brewer Charrington is endeavoring to convert aristocratic tenors. She actually visited the old inn at Chelmsford and saw the room where Dickens spent so many pleasant evenings. Mrs. Bonyng is so pleased with all the surroundings in Essex that she expressed a hope she could make it her permanent home.

BRIDGE STILL POPULAR.

It is not expected that the denunciation of the craze for bridge in so-called high society will have any appreciable effect in abating indulgence in this popular form of gambling. Neither swindlers nor slumbers pay much attention to what preachers say in these days. There is one man who could accomplish more in the way of checking it than all the clergymen in the Church of England combined, were he so minded. If the king were to give up playing bridge and excluded it from the games provided for his entertainment at the great houses which he visits, the force of his example and influence combined would exercise a tremendous effect. But he shows no intention of denying himself the pleasure he gets out of it. During his recent sojourn at Glenquoich as the guest of Lord Burton, he played longer every night, his partner being Miss Jane Thornhill, sister of Lady Burton, who rejoices in the reputation of being the best woman bridge player in all England. It has already been announced that he intends to repeat his visit next year, to be entertained in similar fashion. Possibly the Archbishop of Canterbury, when he returns to England, spiritually strengthened and refreshed by attendance on the Church Congress in America, may summon up courage enough to remonstrate with his majesty on the subject. As the king's "Clerk of the Closet"—an office corresponding to that of Father Confessor, and for which by the way he is paid $55 a year in addition to his salary of $75,000 a year as archbishop—he is supposed to be specially charged with looking after the king's spiritual welfare. It was somewhat significant of the subversive spirit which characterizes the attitude of the English church towards royalty that at the congress no suggestion was made of appealing to the king to lend his assistance to an anti-bridge crusade. Meanwhile there is no doubt that the game has revived the gambling mania to such an extent that it is playing old Harry with fashionable morals and finances. Week-end parties at the great country houses, which used to be devoted to the main to healthful out-door sport and recreation, now frequently serve as excuses for bridge playing all day long and far into the night, Sundays included. And on Monday mornings when the parties break up it is quite a common thing to see the guests exchanging checks for considerable amounts.

HE WAS BEHIND THE TIMES.

An amusing incident, and one illustrative of the rapidity with which modern manners and customs are changing, occurred at the new Lyceum club for women in Piccadilly, on a recent Sunday. A military man, with sun-tanned face and fierce gray moustache, stalked into the main saloon and seated himself near a "mixed" tea party. From behind his paper he glared for a few minutes at the women who were smoking. Then he called a waiter and stormed under his breath. The waiter fled and sent an official of the club to him. After some brief mutual explanations the old veteran strode haughtily out of the room, bestowing a parting frown on its occupants. He had landed that morning from India, and unaware that the rising feminine tide had engulfed the Imperial Service club had hastened to what had been his favorite hanging out place in the old days. But his surprise on discovering it no longer existed was slight to the shock he experienced on learning that during his absence smoking had become a fashionable feminine accomplishment.

Dr. Geo. Ewing, a practicing physician of Smith's Grove, Ky., for over thirty years, writes his personal experience with Foley's Kidney Cure: "For years I had been greatly bothered with kidney and bladder trouble, and enlarged prostate gland. I used everything known to the profession without relief, until I commenced to use Foley's Kidney Cure. After taking three bottles, and feeling entirely cured, I prescribe it now daily in my practice and heartily recommend its use to all physicians for such troubles. I have prescribed it in hundreds of cases with perfect success." F. J. Hill Drug Co.

You Needn't.

You needn't keep distressed after eating, nor belching, nor experiencing nausea between meals.

In other words, you needn't keep on being dyspeptic, and you certainly shouldn't.

Food's Serapapilla cures dyspepsia—it strengthens and tones the stomach, perfects digestion, creates a normal appetite, and builds up the whole system.

Carlyle, whose guesses at truth were more accurate than those of most men, said: "The fraction of life can be increased in value, not so much by increasing your numerator, as by lessening your denominator." And the value of your actual time appropriation may be increased, not so much by increasing the number of mediums used, as by increasing the space used in good mediums.

ELECTRIC DINNER TABLE TRAIN.

The miniature electric train herewith illustrated is intended for service upon the dining table. The rails are laid in a circular form, and the train is designed to supply the guests with wines and cigars, which are loaded into the cars. The coal in the tender is not intended for actual use, but to add to the illusion. The electric motor which drives the clever plaything is concealed underneath the tender. The current is derived from the center rail. It is not likely that this invention will come into general use, as it is expensive and not at all essential to comfort.

WESLEY K. WALTON,

Republican Nominee for State Senator, Third District.

Wesley K. Walton, nominee on the Republican ticket for State Senator for the Third Senatorial District, consisting of Davis, Morgan and Rich counties, was born February 21st, 1859, in Dixfield, Maine.

He came to Utah in 1872, joining the Mormon Church in 1874, having been baptized at Bountiful, Davis county. During the first year or two of his residence there he taught school and in 1876 went to Woodruff, Rich county, where he has since remained, engaging in farming and stockraising. He received his education in the east, having received the degree of Civil Engineer, Bachelor of Science and Master of Arts and is also a graduate of Norwich Military university.

Mr. Walton has held many positions of public trust during his 30 years' residence in Utah, having always taken great interest in political matters—first as a member of the People's Party and later as a Republican, having been chairman of the state committee six years. He was also probate judge, prosecuting attorney and commissioner of Rich county.

He has been closely identified with the interests of Utah and her people, which qualifies him to ably represent his constituents if elected to the office of State Senator of the Third district, embracing Davis, Morgan and Rich counties.

Mr. Walton was married to Frances M. Huffaker in 1876 and is the father of 10 boys and three girls—all of whom are now living.

EZRA F. RICHARDS,

Republican Nominee for Representative from Davis County.

Ezra F. Richards, the Republican nominee for Representative from Davis County, is a son of the late Apostle Franklin D. Richards and Rhoda H. Foss (his parents on both sides being of old New England stock, and prominent in the early history of our country). He was born in Farmington, Davis Co., in 1860, and received his education in the district schools and the B. Y. academy. From 1881 to 1888 he performed a mission to Australasia, and he is charge of, and assisted in translating the Book of Mormon into the Maori language.

During the years 1896 to 1898 he presided over the Australasian mission, and during his incumbency, the mission was divided into two missions. Mr. Richards is now justice of the peace, which office he has held for the last six years with credit to himself and the community. He was county chairman during the last campaign when Davis county was for the first time registered in the Republican column. His travels and experience in several states of our republic and most of the Pacific Islands has added much to his scholastic education, and this together with his occupation, as a farmer, makes him a most practical man, and if elected he will undoubtedly fulfill the duties of his office in a satisfactory manner.
