

not claim a vote there because I was not a resident, and had left the country before I became of age. It is time, therefore, that I established my rights of citizenship somewhere. My sympathies are thoroughly American, but there are family, business and social reasons why I should turn Englishman now. I am settled here for life. Both my children were born here and naturally regard England as their home. While I represent an American company all my business associations are with Englishmen. My ancestors were English and Scotch. All things considered I don't think anyone can find fault with me for the step I have taken."

BACK FROM FRANCE.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Loney, of New York, have returned from the south of France where Mr. Loney had gone to escape the inclemency of the English winter. They have taken a commodious mansion in Lennox gardens, Kensington, where they remain for three months and enter into the festivities of the London season. The Loneys have settled permanently in England, but this is the first time they have taken a London residence. When they went to France it was their intention to let their place at Willoughby, near Rugby, in Northamptonshire, but a suitable tenant could not be found. Now the whole staff of servants, horses, carriages and motor cars have been removed to London for the season and Willoughby Hall is left in charge of caretakers who have to look after the cows and the fowls which roam about the old farmyard. Mr. Loney is a little for society that sort which is always split with a big 8 in England—but Mrs. Loney does not and it was on her initiative that the London residence was taken. She is an enthusiastic motorist and a magnificent horsewoman and Hyde park will see much of her during the season.

ON A BIG SCALE.

When James H. Smith of New York, who inherited the bulk of the great fortune left by his uncle "Chicago Smith," leased Hurley park near Winchester, people of the old cathedral city took but a languid interest in his advent. They sized him up as an American who had some surplus cash, but not much of it, and was not at all disposed to part with it freely. Mr. Smith did nothing to disabuse their minds of this impression. He seemed to care little for the old place and was seldom seen there. But when he installed there his sister, Mrs. Cooper, and her husband, popular opinion has undergone a change regarding the extent of his resources, and munificence. He is doing big things in regulation American millionaire style now, but by proxy through the Coopers. One Winchester storekeeper says that their custom means an additional $5,000 a year in receipts. Other shopkeepers are rejoicing in the profit derived from their patronage. Mr. Smith is regarded as Winchester's good angel.

UNIQUE FOR WOMAN.

Lady Mary Douglas-Hamilton, only daughter and heiress of the late Duke of Hamilton, will next month assume the mastership of the Hamilton Harriers in Herefordshire. It is a somewhat unusual position for a woman to occupy, although she has some predecessors in the field. Lady Mary is described as Winchester's good angel.

voted to horses and hunting and has inherited all the sporting tastes of her father, the twelfth duke. At Easton her place in Suffolk, there is a stable for fifty horses. She is a fearless rider to hounds, and is not deterred from taking any risks by the knowledge that it is a very precious neck that she endangers. Her inheritance includes the island of Arron in Scotland, some 100,000 acres in extent, a fine property in Suffolk, and a considerable sum in cash. She will be twenty-one next November, and seems in no hurry to engage herself to any of her numerous suitors. He will be a lucky man who wins her, but he will have to convince her that he is a plucky one first. What ever accomplishments he may possess he will have to be a first rate sportsman.

ROYALTY AND HORSEFLESH

"King Edward and the emperor of Germany are generally supposed to carry off the palm among royalties for fine horses," writes my Brussels correspondent, "but few people know the extent of the stables of the king of the Belgians. There are now at least 200 steeds there. Sixteen of them are saddle horses, and all thorough breeds especially imported by his majesty either from England or Limoges. A few years ago a gray mare from Berlin was added to the number, for which $2,000 was paid, but she was quickly discarded. The carriage horses are half bred English-Norman, sturdy, and well and strongly built. King Leopold is himself a very fine horseman, and unlike many of his brother monarchs he disdains to mount a horse which has been already specially ridden and fatigued beforehand. Hardly will he allow his mount to be exercised the previous day, so much does he love to feel the animal in full spirits. Last year at Ostend he was often to be seen riding a beautiful black horse, his latest favorite, called Gentile (which means Pretty). He boasts that though a fearless rider he has never had a fall. He is so tall that his saddle has to be specially built for him. His love for automobiles has in no way destroyed his fondness for riding, and he is often to be seen on horseback soon after day-break."

ARMY REFORMATION.

Some day the army council, whose appointment awakened such great expectations, may tackle in earnest the job of reforming the British army, which affords the poorest return for the money expended on it of any army in the world. But apparently it will take a long time before it gets around to it. Last week the board devoted much earnest consideration to the question of the painting of harrack bed-cots and finally reached the decision that those of single soldiers should be given one coat of paint, and those for married soldiers two. Another point settled at the expense of a great consumption of cerebral gray matter was that when an army mop was exchanged, the nail in the head need not be handed back into store. These momentous decisions were duly promulgated in army orders. And yet some inconsiderate lay folk complain that the army council is doing nothing.

ENTRANCE TO THE FAMOUS WINTER PALACE.

The broad avenue leading up to the famous Winter palace at St. Petersburg is spanned at its end by the magnificent double arch shown in the cut. It forms the actual gateway to the palace. This structure is built of the warmest of Italian marble, and its workmanship is particularly admirable. The colossal group at the top is a fine specimen of the sculpture of the last century.

KODOL DIGESTS WHAT YOU EAT

I had stomach trouble for six months. Nothing benefited me until I tried Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It has cured me, and I recommend Kodol to all people suffering with stomach trouble.
W. E. FRAZIER, Martins Store, Ill.
For ten years I suffered from Dyspepsia and spent hundreds of dollars to no avail. One night while feeling exceptionally bad, I was about to throw down the evening paper when my eye caught an advertisement of Kodol. I thought it like everything else, and even told the druggist when I bought a bottle: "Well, here goes another dollar thrown away." My wife laughed at me, but after the second dose I felt better, and although I have used but two bottles I am stronger and better than I have been in years.
