THE SIMPSON POLYGAMY CASE

THE WORK OF IMPANELING A JURY. The first case in the District Court his morning was that of the United States vs. Thomas Simpson, Indicted for polygamy. At the outset considerable delay was caused by the non-apbeen subpænaed. Attachments were issued, and the proper officers dispatched to bring the dilatory witnesses into court, and in the meantime the Court took a recess of about an hour On convening the remainder of the forenoon session was occupied in obtaining a jury

Of the first twelve jurors called, John McKeller, John McLaws, Willard Smith and Thos. E. Jeremy, Jr., were excused on account of their belief in the doctrine of polygamy as taught by the Latter-day Saints; and William B. Barton was also excused, having formed an opinion as to the merits of the case. Five more were called, three of whom, atmosphere and laid the dust on the W. S. Crismon, Thomas McLelland, Jr., and George J. Felt, were excused upon being questioned concerning their belief in polygamy. Robert J. Deighton, after standing the cross-fire of Mr. Dickson for some time, was also excused. He said he was a member of the "Mormon" Church but was in doubt as to his standing. He was decidedly opposed to the practice of palygamy, and beleved that the revelation on that subect was bogus. In the absence of law in the matter, he would consider that any man who had two living and undivorced wives, or who consbited with nore than one woman, was guilty of a noral wrong. He was challenged peremptorisly by Mr. Dickson. Jos. R. Mathews, having formed an opinion concerning the guilt or innocence of the defendant was excused. and R. H. Wheeler was premptorily challenged by Mr. C. O., Whittenore, attorney for the defendant. Andrew J. Pendleton said he was member of the Church of Latter-day Saints and supposed himself to be in good standing. His parents were also members of that denomination. He deemed polygamy, under any circumstances, wrong, and rejected the revelation commanding it, as being spurious. He evinced an equal readiness to convict a person charged with that crime as with any other, providing the evidence appeared to be sufficient to convict Ir. Dickson seeme i to doubt the position of the juror and challenge ! him He was excused. Mr. John D. Spencer was the next juror examined. He was also a "Mormon," as were his family and many of his relatives. He considered himself in good fellowship with the members of that Church. But when Mr. Dickson touched upon his belief concernin all respects, to those heretofore ing the doctrine of having more than one wife at one time, Mr. Spencer stated frankly that he did not believe age spurious, but at the same time he did not believe in it. He admitted that it might have been given of God, but believed that it was morally wrong to practice it. In his opinion there was no person living who was good enough and pure enough to live a proper life in the practice of polygamy He thought the principle of plural marriage was revealed from God and that the revelation enjoined obedience on the part of those who believed it, out still he considered it wrong for any one to obey it. Mr. Dickson, seemingly unable to reconcile these conflicting beliefs, peremptorily chal> lenged the juror and he was excused. This exhausted the jury list and only ten had been accepted to act in this case. Six more names were drawn from the box, after which the court adourned until 2 p.m.

AFTERNOON'S PROCEEDINGS. S. J. Lynne was the first juror exa member of the "Mormon" Church, nor were any of his relatives: said he thought it right under certain circumstances for a person to have more than one living and undivorced wife at the same time. He thought it right as long as the man having them did not interfere with the rights of any one else. He was challenged and excused. W. F. Raybould answered the usual questions, but was peremptorily challenged by the defense. Isaac Jennings said he thought he was a member of the "Mormon" Church, but did not consider himself | hand. in fellowship with that body. He believed polygamy morally wrong. Did not think the revelation on the doctrine of polygamy was from God. Regarded it as spurious. He had no prejudice no bias in opposition to the prosecution against polygamy. He was accepted and sworn. Westley S. Trescott answered all the usual questions until his religious belief was touched upon, when his answers were unsatisfactory and he was

Oscar H. Hardy was the next one called to fill the vacancy still remaining, but having formed an opinion in the case, he was also excused.

George F. Price was the next one excosed on account of his belief in polygamy.
More names were drawn from the ury box, and there was some talk of an open venier, as our reporter left the court room with the last of the "copy" for to-day's issue.
