TRUST COMPANIES

Have No Recourse in Law Against Contract Violators.

ST. LOUIS, May 18.—A trust company has no recourse in law if a member of the trust violates an agreement with the trust, according to a ruling by the St. Louis court.

United States court, today. The decision was rendered in the case of the American Invertase company against the Taylor Manufacturing company. For years prior to 1988 the Taylor company agreed not to go into business again in this country for twenty-five years, or until the trust died. In 1894 the company did go into business again, and when the American Preservers' company brought suit to en-

The commissioner said he wished the "public to understand that there is a coterie of men in Washington, a few of whom are in the pension office, who have formed a conspiracy to break down my character as a public officer and a private citizen, and bring the pension office into public disrepute. I am not going to be driven from the office by those men. I have devoted my best thought and energy to the one of the most efficient working organizations of the Government. While there are a few persons who should be removed for disloyalty and inefficiency, the great body of the office is composed of intelligent in-
