Leslie's Popular Monthly for December is just to hand, with its usual quota of good and light reading. Its leading articles are "The Chief Justice of the United States," "Choctaw Justice," "Origin of European Public Libraries," "Empire and the Fall of the Empire," and "California, the City of Palaces," all well illustrated, and are well worth reading. To be had of J. H. Parry & Co.

LOCAL AND OTHER MATTERS.

High Council.—The members of the High Council are requested to meet in the Social Hall, on Friday evening, November 16th, at 7 o'clock.

WILLIAM W. TAYLOR, Clerk.

A Broken Arm.—Young George Lambert, a lad of ten years, employed as a cash boy at Z. C. M. I., met with a misfortune on Tuesday last. He was making a sudden turn when he slipped on the floor, which had been made slippery by sprinkling, and falling broke his right arm. He was attended to by Dr. Anderson and is getting along very well. The boy is a son of Elder George C. Lambert, now absent in Europe on a mission.

Navage's Art Room.—Since removing into his new quarters, Mr. C. H. Navage, the photographer, has striven earnestly and successfully to enhance the former excellent reputation of his establishment. One of the new features added to the result of his enterprise, is the art room occupying the commodious front apartment on the first floor. The walls are hung with the finest specimens of steel engravings, wood cuts, etc., while the samples of the photographer's art, turned out at the establishment, are likewise on display. A visit to the art room will repay the lover of the beautiful and refined.

A Theatrical Friend.—The genial visage of H. B. Emery the actor, now under engagement with the Katie Putnam combination which opens at the Salt Lake Theatre this evening, beamed in upon us this morning. Harry has changed all since he was last here, but we are pleased to add for the better. He is looking well and feeling, he says, finely. He is recently from Chicago, where he spent the summer and to put it in dramatic parlance, "did a good business." He severed his connection with the Boyd dramatic company and joined the Putnam troupe, with which he has been moving westward via Denver, Leadville and other places. He thinks he will go no further with this company, and though not yet prepared to follow the good advice of his old friends and settle down in the home of his youth, will probably remain here for some time visiting his folks, before joining another troupe and returning East.

The Nineteenth Ward Concert.—The concert given by the Giles Glee Club and Orchestra in the Nineteenth Ward last evening was, artistically, a perfect success. The programme was of unusual excellence, and was performed in a manner that would do credit to professionalists.

The violin solo by Mr. W. O. Oliva, was a masterpiece, executed in a manner rarely surpassed by any performer in this city. The piccolo solo by Mr. J. H. Smith, was equally good, and both selections received well merited accolades. The solos by Mrs. Hall and Miss Drake were real gems. Miss Drake never sang more beautifully or effectively, and the encore she received was a perfect storm of applause. The orchestral selections and accompaniments, and the glees and choruses by the Glee Club, were excellently rendered, as were also the songs by the gentlemen of the Club. The entertainment was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

The organization is without doubt the best combination of amateur talent in the city, and is one that is well deserving of encouragement. We understand it is their intention to work up a first class orchestra and glee club, and with this end in view their purpose giving concerts in the various wards of the city, and in their entertainments are like the one given in the Nineteenth Ward last evening, all who attend cannot but be having a profitable evening's enjoyment.

AMONG THE NAVAJOES.

THE WORK OF REFORM AMONG THE RED-MEN. A LOUD SERMON PREACHED IN A PRACTICAL WAY.

From accounts given by two brethren, L. C. Burnham and E. A. Tietjen by name, just up from the San Juan settlements in New Mexico, some interesting facts have been gleaned in relation to the progress of the work of reform among the Navajo Indians of that section. The first named of our informants left Hyde Park, in Cache County, and the latter Santaquin, in Utah County, some eight years since, to settle on the Moen Coppy in Arizona. They were among the founders of that settlement, and afterwards located Bayola, where Brother Tietjen still resides, his companion having been called about three years ago to settle on the San Juan, two hundred miles from Moen Coppy but contiguous to the same Indian reservation.

Both have performed missionary work among the Lumanites, whom they represent as peaceable and well disposed, improving in their moral and social condition, and prosperous in temporal affairs. The brethren are united in the opinion, which is undoubtedly the correct one, that it is necessary to reform the red men before converting them, and have accordingly directed their efforts almost entirely thus far, to showing them the advantages which accrue from habits of temperance, honesty and industry, thus preparing the way for higher or spiritual things in due season.

Brother Tietjen says the loudest person yet preached among the Indians in his neighborhood, was the construction of two mammoth reservoirs or dams, each a mile long by a quarter of a mile wide, to husband the water freshets which pour down from the mountains at certain seasons of the year and constitute the main, if not the sole dependence of the inhabitants of that locality for irrigating purposes. The only other source of supply being the wells which furnish water for domestic use.

The Indians, when first told of the intention of their white brethren to build these reservoirs, declared it to be impossible for them to withstand the force of the floods. But now that they have seen with their own eyes the success of the experiment, the durability of the work, and have witnessed the improved condition of the land, which, under a regular system of irrigation, has been made so much more productive than formerly, their doubts are silenced and they are compelled to acknowledge the superior judgment and intelligence of those who are sent among them for the purpose of winning their confidence and turning them from the ignorance and error of their ways.

Brother Tietjen has been up from the south for about two weeks. He started back yesterday. Brother Burnham arrived in the city on Wednesday, and will visit his friends in Cache Valley, before returning to New Mexico in about a fortnight.

ATTEMPTED FRATRICIDE.

ONE BROTHER FIRES FIVE SHOTS AT ANOTHER, BUT LOOKSLY MISSES HIS AIM.

Residents in the neighborhood of the old Tuttle mansion House on the State Road, were startled last evening at hearing on the street five sharp reports as of many pistol shots, and on running to their doors and windows, witnessed a scene the like of which, for the good name of our city and its inhabitants, it is a matter of congratulation is exceedingly rare. Elbridge G. Tuttle, of the firm of Nystrom and Tuttle, saloon keepers, a toad with his hand clutching a pistol, from the muzzle of which the smoke was still emerging, and glaring vindictively at the retreating form of his elder brother, Don C. Tuttle, whose life had evidently been the object of his fratricidal shot. Don continued on his way, and with a face as pale as death, some minutes afterwards called the police office at the City Hall and related what had taken place.

In the meantime officer Alex. Burd, who happened that way in time to hear the shots, was informed of what had occurred and proceeded at once to arrest the younger brother, who resisted and compelled the officer to summon other assistance before he could be taken to the Hall. He was finally lodged in jail, and remained there for several hours, during which repeated efforts were made by his friends to obtain his release, which was at last effected about 9 o'clock, after his partner, Mr. Nystrom, had signed a bond for his appearance whenever wanted.

The cause of the assault is said to be a jealous misunderstanding between the two brothers over the sale of their mother, who died several weeks since, the elder of the two, Don C., being the administrator of the property. Just prior to the shooting an angry altercation had taken place, the alleged subject of which was a lot of pork, which Elbridge claimed had not been distributed so as to give him his share. Don C. in reply said that he as administrator was in duty bound to give an account of everything in the estate, and as soon as Elbridge had done so in relation to a piano which he had taken from among the family effects without condescending to that formality, his (Don) would divide the pigs and make any disposition of them that might be mutually agreeable. The other resented the insinuation, and it is said refused to come to any arrangement regarding the piano, and had words followed by worse actions were the result.

Elbridge, it is said, took hold of his brother first, when the latter struck him or shook loose and walked on, but had not proceeded far when the firing commenced.

The above account is gathered from various sources. Doubtless the examination, which is set for 9 o'clock on Friday morning, before Justice Spiers, will evolve additional particulars. The defendant, it is understood, will waive examination, but it is necessary that enough evidence should be taken to enable the Court to determine the amount of bail.

Katie Putnam.—Miss Katie Putnam, supported by her own dramatic company, appears at the Theatre this evening, opening her three night's engagement with the well-known dramatization from Dickens, the "Old Curiosity Shop." An eastern paper says of her in this piece:

"To say that the public was pleased with the production, would convey but a faint idea of the gratification experienced, for the evidences of an intense inward delight were glared on every countenance. The assertion is not overdrawn when we remark that Dickens' Little Nell was almost an inspiration so sublime in its conception and so grand in truthfulness to nature is it in execution. The character is not only grand, but it approaches a climacteric where the word superb is voluntarily finds an appropriate expression. It bears on its front in every scene, thoughts, and feelings, and emotions which appeal irresistibly to the higher manhood and gentler womanhood of our nature. Dickens' Little Nell will yet immortalize Katie Putnam. In this character she has won a national reputation, and we may safely say that no actress on the American stage is her equal."

Immigrants Arrived.—The company of immigrants in charge of Elder John Pickett, reached Ogden as expected about 8 o'clock last night, and those destined for this city and points further south, arrived shortly after noon to-day. They were blessed with the usual prosperity in crossing the sea, only one accident occurring while on the water, and that the bursting of one of the boiler pipes to the engine, which caused a delay of eight hours while it was being repaired. The company left Liverpool, it will be remembered, on the 27th of October, and landed at New York on the evening of the 6th inst. At 9 o'clock on the following night they were aboard the cars and had started for the west. Nothing occurred of an unpleasant nature by rail, and they reached their journey's end in excellent health and buoyant spirits. Those who came down to the city were met, as usual by their immediate friends and relatives, or conveyed by the teams provided by the Bishop to the Immigrant House in the Tithing Yard.
