A wonderful merchant has just died in Liverpool, England. His name was Mr. Edward Garston. In youth he was great traveler, and became an accomplished linguist, so that he acted as interpreted at Queen Caroline's trial. He engaged in the Greek revolution and showed great bravery. Afterwards he kept the duellists of Naples in terror with his reputation Returning to England he settled down as a merchant in Liverpool. He was in addition to his other professions, an author.

Sign of the Times.—No cases in the police court since Saturday. Is not this a sign of the duil times? Chronic inebriates are evidently out of funds and can't buy any bad whiskey, neither does it seem that they beg or steal much of the "cradition to his other professions, an author."
