cettlo. Both are new to the lyric stage in New York, and both to a minor extent shared in the triumph of Miss Farrar. T lose who reappeared in the cast to-night were: Pol Plancon, as Friar Lau-renze: Journet, as Capulet: Muehl-mann, as the Duc de Verone: Miss Jo-senhine Jacoby, as Stephano the page. sephine Jacoby, as Stephano the page, and Jacques Bars, as Tybalt. Miss Neundorff, as Gertrude, and Boque, as Gregorio, completed the cast, Samuel Boyy, a French conductor, held the baton for the first time in this country. Never perhaps before in the history Never perhaps before in the history of the house has Gounod's tuneful mas-terplece been sung under auspices more grateful to the audience and to the ar-fist. New York was there in her full glocy, and before the end of the beau-tiful balcony scene the old house blazed with coler from orchestra to the top-neat endow.

tiful balcony scene the old house Dilazed with color from orchestra to the top-most gallery. But there was one feature essentially new. Before the first act was over Miss Farrar had won her house, which brought her back again and again at the fall of the curtain. It was not un-til the end of the balcony scene, how-ever, that the triumph of the Ameri-can girl, returned to her own people, was fully feit. With every seat in the great house tilled, the audience waited without a handelan, deeply intent upon solo and duet, until the curtain drop-ped. Then indeed the young artist had cause to feel that it was into warm American hearts she had so quickly sung her way. She was recalled fully a dozen times, and at each recal pages carried upon the stage great i foral pieces and clusters of American Beau-ty roses. They came until the prima donna and Mr. Rousselliere, her Romeo, stood before a high bank of roses, and still the audience called. It was a graceful welcome, and most graciously received.

He bequeathed $550 to the Cigarmakers' union, William Foster be-queathed a similar sum to the organi-zation. John Porter left the members of the union $50, but stipulated that the sum should be used to "have a good time" at his funeral.

New York, Nov. 27.—The two spec-tators probably most interested in last night's performance at the Mettropoli-tan' Opera House were compelled to take their places among those stand-ing at the back of the brass rall as there was no seats to be had for them. They were Sld Farrar and his wife, the parents of the young American prima donna

When they thought of securing seats When they thought of securing seats for themselves it was already too late. Another interested spectator in the orchestra stalls was Mme. Emma, Eames, who made her first appearance before her own countrymen as Juliette on the stage of the Metropolitan 50 years ago. Everybody applauded Miss Farrar most enthusiastically.
