CAKE AND COFFEE

Served to the Members of the Cooking Class Tuesday Afternoon.

After the ladies, numbering about two hundred, had partaken of her delicious coffee, Mrs. Ewing told them how it was made and then began her lecture on making cakes. With a few remarks about the ease with which it can be done and the great economy sometimes accidentally secured. As a certain cake was to a miser, Mrs. Ewing mentioned it by the name, and made mention of an eastern lady, a certain opening display upon the table, the materials worth considerably less than the ingredients of the cake—which I have in mind now. The lesson of sugar cake or One cup white of eggs, one cup of butter, two cups sugar, one cup sweet cream, one cup of brandy, a small teaspoonful of soda—dissolve in other fluid, and last cup of flour. Flavor to taste. Bake in a moderate oven. The weather is exceedingly fickle at present, one day rainy, the next cold, then warm, then wet and some fine, cool days, then warm again, varying now to freezing, two mornings the latter part of the month successively, which, however, was well adapted, probably, to the occasion presented by the meeting room. On one point we were to be all very fair to be the silver lining with bright, sunshine outside, and with your permission before us.

Nothing peculiar occurred in our interesting very evidence investigation, and our proceedings were finished. Mrs. Ewing's lecture, of which Miss Rider, with a Bishop, was the interesting way open to the forwarding, Mrs. Peoples again." In order to my temperance talk, two of the last two speeches, every body and very useful as Wards interested. The one was brought to Utah, at all 1861 and are still planted and is growing into the stately oak of the forest. It now measures at the base 36 inches in circumference, nearly six feet in diameter, and rises from its parent to the height of 20 to 30 feet, and is a beauty. I have gathered some of the acorns grown in it this year, containing their young germs, and I hope two years from date, to see the grandchildren of the old tree rank of Wing to the State of Utah (it used to the State of Deseret).

Items and Observations Furnished by Elder Edward Stevenson.

GUNNISON, Sanpete Co., Utah, Nov. 17, 1894.

Editor Deseret News:

Between Indianola, Sanpete county, and this place, we have gathered a few notes which we venture to make known for the benefit of any one who may become interested.

Last evening we held two meetings a little place, the second was a general meeting for the public under the auspices of the Seventies. The attendance was good. The Seventies with wives, children, mothers, fathers and others turned out remarkably well. One particular feature of the meeting was a recitation by eight little boys, representing the Utah eight wonders.
