

INSTRUCTIONS

The Duties of Voters in Preparing Their Ballots.

(To be read for each person—Citizens before casting their votes, and the others to attend the public places in consequence.)

To OBTAIN BALLOTS FOR VOTING:

Mark your name to the judges of election, who will, if your name appears on the official list, give you a ballot. If your name does not appear, the judges will give you a ballot for voting by marking in ink in the appropriate margin, opposite a cross (X) after the name of the candidate you prefer for each office.

To USE YOUR BALLOT FOR VOTING:

On receiving your ballot from the election judges immediately write across its face, in the unoccupied corners, the names of your wife, children, parents, and other近亲 (near relatives) for whom you desire to vote. If you desire to vote a straight ticket put a cross (X) in the square opposite the name of your party or party ticket. Before voting, fold your ticket in the same manner it was folded when you received it, so that the seal can be removed from the top without revealing the X.

Keep your ballot as follows, and approach the judge at the ballot box. Announce your name again and hand your ballot to the judge, who will then open it and count it. Do not forget to seal the ballot and remember your name in the upper right-hand corner, turn the name down and seal it. If you do not seal your ballot, it will be permitted to return it to you, and you will cast it. Put the ballot, with the printed endorsement thereon upon your desk, look yourself in full view in the judges.

To OBTAIN NEW BALLOTS:

If you are unable to read or write the English language, or, by reason of physical disability, cannot prepare your ballot without assistance, make application to the election judges at whom will then render you assistance in the marking and preparation of your ballot for voting.

U. S. SENATOR.
County Clerk.

By Deputy Clerk.

Dated at Salt Lake City, Utah, October 24, 1896.

Citizen Railroad Thieves.

Three of the cleverest thieves, who seem to have adopted the art of thieving in a most unique manner, are now behind bars in Chicago. They were named respectively Peter Neeson, John J. Daly, and J. W. Miller, and J. C. Miller, the latter is the leader of the gang. The Chicago Journal describes the methods of the gang as follows:

Miller would allow himself to be picked up in a big box, which was fitted with straps to prevent injury and supplied with a saw, hammer and wrench, and a lot of tools of precision.

This box would be shipped from Chicago to some western city. While the box was en route to Miller would crawl out of his box, break open cases of merchandise in the car, and pack his box with the goods. Then, with a boxful of merchandise, he would find his way out, and return to Chicago ready for another trip.

When the box had reached its destination a telegram would be sent from Chicago asking that it be returned to this city. It would then be taken to the Party warehouse, 200 Walsh Avenue, where it would be delivered to a pawnbroker and an armful dealer. Miller was the man who went into the box. Neeson, also a member of the gang, would stand outside the box and act as the manager of them. They admitted having been engaged in the scheme for six months past. The railway officials have been unable to find any trace of the men, but beyond the fact that the thief had entered the car and escaped through a hole in the floor they know nothing.

Special Agent Riley, of the Northwestern railway solves the mystery. Friday, says the Journal, a big box was sent to W. T. Johnson arrived at Chicago, and when he opened it a note cut in the dust. The contents of the car had been tampered with. A telegram signed W. T. Johnson informed him that the box had been sent to him to be returned to 200 Walsh Avenue, Chicago, by way of the American Express company. Special Agent Riley and inspector of the railroad reported to the office of Inspector Firestone and Detective Neeson and Miller were detailed to search him. The officers hit to Party's warehouse, and found the box. The box was sent to a box containing in W. T. Johnson they placed them under arrest. One of the men attempted to draw a revolver, but was quickly overpowered. The men gave the names of Neeson and Parker. At the central police station they told of a third man whom they knew not. The officers then went to the Hotel Irving, 31½ West Huron street, and arrested a man who gave the name of James C. Miller.

The box when broken open disclosed several packages of tobacco, worth $100. The thief had been given two days' pay and a month's assignment of work and money to Wright Blue, Pittsburg, Pa., and for the time being he had no money, as he was from the Cincinnati Stockyards. During the past six months the men have stolen thousands of dollars' worth of goods.

Suspense Milk.

A Connecticut milkman has told us about his unfortunate experience with both his young heifers, out of a herd of 30. Young heifers, suddenly began to give birth that tasted like "strange soap," while other cows gave milk on command. The milk was not affected, though all the cows were fed from the same pasture and him. Our friend here informs us that the trouble has since disappeared, the milk from only two heifers showing the bad taste slightly. He is convinced that the cause was turning the cows into hills, dry feed, and disease.

The consequence of feeding diseased animals seems—the heifers, probably, eating more than the cows. The lesson is to turn the cattle into pasture gradually—a few hours at a time only at first.—Rural New Yorker.
