HER SOLICITUDE.

Mrs. Hooley at once became greatly alarmed. With tears streaming from her eyes she jumped to her feet, looked wildly about her and cried: "Oh. that is him. I am afraid he is suffering." She was calmed by County Atty. Hanson who assured her that her husband was quite dead. "Didn't you want him to die?" asked the attorney. "I did not want him to suffer," re-plied the woman, again smiling.

"I did not want him to suffer," re-plied the woman, again smilling. Mrs. Hooley said she was in fear that her husband was going to send her to the hospital again and she did not want to go. She declared that she bought the revolver to kill her husband with and when asked why she wanted to kill him, simply replied:

I THOUGHT IT WAS BEST.

I THOUGHT IT WAS BEST. 'I thought it was best, the best way out of it. If he were gone and I were gone the children would be all right.' Later she said: 'I suppose it is more it is more it is more it is more the best way out of it.'' The way to town on the street car Mrs. Hooley sat next her six year old son Wille. JURY SUMMONED.

The jury summoned by Justice Bishop was composed of William S. Davidson, H. Marsters and H. B. Clark. The first witness examined by the jury was little johnnie Hooley, aged 10 years. He de-scribed how his mother went to a drawer in the bed room, took up a re-volver, walked to the front room and shot twice into the body of his papa. Albert E. Cromar jestified that Mrs. Hooley came over to his place and said: "Send for a doctor, Mr. Hooley is dead." Mr. Cromar did not believe the woman, but she insisted and then said: "He is dead. I shot him and here is the revolver." Mrs. Hooley then drew he revolver from the folds of her skirt. Cromar at once telephoned the officers. Deputy Sheriff Smith related the condition of the house and she and steele arrived. He also described the condi-tion of the two empty shells were still in the revolver. The first three wit-messes were examined outdoors in front of the house, while Mrs. Hooley was conversing with a neighbor in the bed-room and County Atty. Hanson spoke vould like a statement from her. "The jury would like to hear your explanation of this saffair," said her "but you understand that you do not have to make any statement if you do not wish to or answer any questions unless you care to do so." Jury: "We had a misunderstanding and I wanted to leave him. He got angry some time ago and went to a lawyer for a divorce but the lawyer told him for a divorce but the lawyer told him that he had no grounds for a divorce. Then we went to the lawyer again and drew up an agreement and he promised not to bother me. We had separated before when I went away to Bingham but we lived together again after that and he burned up his agreement but I still have mine. Some time ago, I don't know when, he came home and wanted me to go to Bingham to live but I would not go because I could not but I would not go because I could not trust the children with him."

Before starting for Topeka, Mr. Tucker gave out a printed statement in his defense in which he said: "When the people of this country know the truth, they will suspend judgment until the case comes to trial. The Standard Oil company is behind the whole deal, and thousands of peo-ple in Kansas believe this to be true. I have committed no crime, have de-frauded no man and every dollar I have in the world is invested in the Uncle Sam Oil company. I have so-licited money from the people of the United States in absolute good faith and with this money have built three refineries. 150 miles of pipe line, pur-chased thousands of acres of the best oil lands in Kansas, and in other ways have built up the biggest competitor of the Standard Oil company in the west. Now that the Uncle Sam com-pany is getting big enough to be a real competitor of the Standard. I am stabled in the back with an indict-ment faked upon the testimony of a few diagruntied stockholders. But the fight is only begun. Already I have had assurances from some of the best men in Kansas that they would stand by me to the last ditch. All I ask is that the people and the stockholders all over the country stand by me and the only real competitor the oil trust has in the west."

A LITTLE FLURRY IN THE RUEF CASE.

San Francisco, April 9 .--- In the course of an exhaustive examination by Mr. Ach for the defense. Otis admitted that he had gained from newspaper reading a very strong impression that Ruef was a dishonest and corrupt man. "But," said the juror,

"I could put that impression aside long enough to give him a fair trial." Otis said that the returning by the grand jury against Ruef of 65 indict-ments for bribery had greatly strengthened his belief in Ruef's guilt, as did also Ruef's failure to appear for trial, and declaration by the court that he was a furgitive from instice. At that, and declaration by the court that he was a fuglitive from justice. At this point Ach reverted to the line of examination previously employed by the defense to determine whether in the minds of talesmen there existed the belief that Judge Dunne consider-ed Rust guilty and desired his con-viction.

Though Ach's question was adroit-ly put, it apparently roused the indig-nation of the court. "Don't ask any more questions on that point," com-manded Judge Dunne.

"Does your honor mean," said Ach, "that I am not to ask this juror or any other juror whether his mind has been influenced toward the defendant by influenced toward the defendant by any belief the juror might have gained though erroneously, the court desired in the case?"

"That is exactly what I menn," was the reply

LOWER COURT AFFIRMED.

In Action Brought to Recover Damages Against San Pedro.

The supreme court has handed down an option affirming the judgment of the lower court in the case of Frank Owens, appellant, vs. the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railway company. The action was brought to recover damages for personal injuries received by plaintiff while employed as a bridge carpenter for defendant at Islen. Nev., in December, 1903. Owens was riding to his work on a push car when a long piece of scantowens was riding to his work on a push car when a long piece of scant-ling on the car struck the ground and threw the car off the track, injuring plaintiff. At the trial of the case in the lower court the attorneys for de-fendant moved that the court instruct the jury to bring in a verdict for de-fendant and the motion was granted. From this ruling of the court an ap-peal was taken. The supreme court holds that the lower court did not err in granting the motion for peremptory instruction to the jury and hence the judgment is affirmed. Judge Ritchle of the district court wrote the opinion of the court, which is concurred in by Chief Justice McCartv and Justice Frick.
