

LOCAL AND OTHER MATTERS.

Not Small-pox.—A report that small-pox had appeared at Mantion, near Brigham City, Box Elder County, caused the authorities to adopt quarantine precautions. Fortunately the malady supposed to be the dreaded disease turns out to be something else.

Foggy.—The fog which settled over and enveloped this valley during the early part of yesterday, vanished during the latter portion of the day. Late last night the fog curtain again dropped, and its density was greater than ever. The misty atmospheric condition has continued through the whole of today.

The Masonic Ball.—In our columns will be found the advertisement of the third annual grand concert and ball of the Masonic fraternity, to be held in the Theatre, on the night of Thursday, Jan. 19th, 1882. The names of the various committees for the several leading localities of Utah were published yesterday in connection with the announcement. Doubtless it will be a brilliant affair, and largely attended.

Uncle Tom.—The Anthony and Ellis Ideal Tom's Cabin Company performed before a very fair-sized audience last night—not so large, however, as on the two previous nights. The disagreeable condition of the atmosphere probably deterred quite a number from attending, but would otherwise have been present. The play was thoroughly enjoyed by those who witnessed it. It will be repeated to-night, to-morrow afternoon at a matinee, and in the evening for the last time.

The Art Exhibition.—The first exhibit of the Utah Art Association opened last evening. Considering the adverse character of the weather and the fact of its being the initiatory opening, the attendance was quite encouraging. We have seen a large number of public art collections, and we will say to begin with, that this one is highly creditable both in point of number and merit. There are about 200 specimens, as near as we could determine, about three-fourths of which are Utahian productions.

There are many very fine paintings of outside artists, loaned by prominent citizens. They are delightful to look at, but the main interest must centre in the home specimens, for the objects of the Association and exhibition are the encouragement and culture of the fine arts. Geo. M. Ottinger, has an excellent collection, but many of them are familiar, not being of very late date. The last from his brush is a gem. Burning blubber on a whale ship, into which some very beautiful contrasts are introduced in the effects produced by co-mingling of white oil light and moonlight. John Tullidge has two large paintings of Pleasant Valley scenes, but his "Sunset" eclipses all of his other productions by great odds. There is a grandeur and effectiveness about this picture that artists do not often so happily throw into their paintings.

The best pictures of Dan, Wegeland are a couple of fish, fruit and vegetable subjects. The mountain trout look so natural, that they appear as if they could be lifted off the dish into the frying pan. Fred Lambourn's two landscape sketches in crayon, representing moonlight, are excellent, and his two paintings of the Golden Gate have some splendid points.

W. V. Morris paints with much strength and vigor as displayed in his Combat between two Lions. This picture shows great animation, the facility of expression being ingeniously maintained in the furious faces of the two kingly beasts. Had the conception been original we should have considered this one of the highest specimens. The idea, however, was taken from an engraving. There must always be a premium on originality. There can be no doubt about the quality of the manipulation of this painting. It is excellent.

Lorus Pratt's portraits of Orson Pratt and Parley P. Pratt have been noticed before. They are highly creditable, as are also some of his productions.

C. Bowring has some little figure subjects, which show considerable individuality, providing they are original.

A portrait of Geo. A. Meears, by John Hagen, is very finely worked up.

There are some drawings of the human figure, in various postures by H. B. Wechsler, that strike an artistic eye at once. It would be difficult to tell how they could be improved.

Mr. Mitchell has a little landscape which is chiefly admirable for the fitness of the work on it. The scene is without a deep perspective and therefore does not give wide scope for skillful display.

H. L. Culmer presents a couple of neat little landscapes.

W. Clawson has a picture that strikes the eye, being strongly individualized. It is Sidney Carton on the executioner's scaffold.

Kirstall Abbey, by J. H. Reeves has some very good work in it. The building part shows very fair artistic taste.

Miss Priscilla Jennings has a couple of landscapes that show a good deal of ability.

Phineas Young also exhibits specimens of his skill as an artist, which are worthy of recognition. There are other palatable works which would notice, did time and space permit. We cannot, however, pass over a very creditable specimen of the skill of young Harry Brown, of Ogden. It is in the shape of raised rustic lettering, with frame of the same character, cut out of one solid piece of white Vermont marble.

We consider it quite a treat to pass along the hall and examine the pictures. Our citizens should patronize the exhibition.

SOAP MANUFACTURE.

A HOME INDUSTRY THAT SHOULD BE LIBERALLY SUPPORTED.

"There is nothing like leather," is a common phrase, and it may be stated with equal justice that there are few things like soap. This saponaceous substance is an indispensable necessity in every household. Its struggle for a prominent place among Utah's home manufactures would form an interesting narrative, beginning with the time long before the railroads were built in the great West, when from Utahian housewives saved their grease with exquisite care, and scrupulously divided it, one part going to the making of the shallow looking dip cancles, and the residue plumped into the capacious soap-kettle. These were the days when lye and lye were scarce in these parts than either of them are now, and the household soap was generally a terrible looking article. The proportion of grease largely preponderated over that of its antidote, some of the struggles to raise a lather with the clumsy chunks being almost pathetic.

In many instances the shapes of the supposed squares bars description. In color, they were somewhat after the tone of an adobe, but almost without form, although not void. Still the people got along very well in the times when soap-making seasons were as regular in the household as washing days. Comparatively few used the imported article, the price of it being something extraordinary. The first to endeavor to create a saponaceous revolution of any extent was Mr. Chas. Popper. He imported the necessary apparatus from St. Louis, at a good deal of expense, several years before the railroad was built, and established a soap factory at his slaughter house on the Bench, northeast of the city. He also imported a soap maker, who turned out to be a fizzle at the business, for he utterly spoiled the first batch. Another man was brought on, who boiled over the bungled batch of soap, and the factory turned out good wares. But after a while the railroad came along, reducing freights and causing imported soap to tumble in price, so Mr. Popper didn't make his fortune out of that branch of business, which finally languished and expired, high-priced tallow and too much railroad having brought on a consumption to the business, but not of the home manufactured soap.

Several smaller soap makers started up, but they proved to be merely bubbles, which burst and vanished at the first whiff of a breeze of adversity. But Brother John B. Maiben started a factory in the 19th Ward that was the initiatory base upon which soap has been built up as a home industry. He started out under a cloud, some of his first productions having been impaired by improper proportions in the mixture of materials. Although this was soon rectified in subsequent batches, the flavor of the mistake hung to it for some time, public prejudice being hard to turn when it once gets to going in any direction.

In the fall of 1874 the Utah manufacturing Company bought out Brother Maiben. Since that time till now the price of standard laundry soap has been on the decline. At that time it was sold at $3.25 a box of 60 lbs. It has gradually decreased until now it has reached the comparatively low figure of $3.50.

The people of Utah are not aware of the debt of gratitude they owe to the home soap makers who have been and are still struggling to maintain the ground against importers. They have been contending vigorously and determinedly against the most adverse circumstances, and the large reduction in one of the most common necessities of every day household use is due to their commendable persistency.

And it is not extravagant to assert that if they were to "shut up shop" and let the industry die, the price of soap would take an upward jump that would "astonish the natives." Mr. Kirk—or any other parties placing soap on the Utah market—has been compelled to bring down the price in order to hold the ground. It is also to the financial advantage of railroad companies to keep the importation avenues open, and special rates have been given to outside makers, to enable them to maintain their stand. It will be seen that this comparatively humble home industry has kept scores of thousands of dollars in the pockets of the people of the country in a steady stream. This correct view of the case increases the moral obligation of the people to sustain the home makers by using their wares, which are acknowledged to be of an excellent quality.

About the beginning of 1879, Mr. Henry Snell commenced the manufacture of soap. His productions were, in our opinion, scarcely excelled by any. He had a special pride in making superior soap of every class he manufactured. Mr. Snell was bought out by the Utah Soap Manufacturing Company in April, 1881. Now the excellencies of both establishments are combined. The present capacity of the concern is from 50,000 to 60,000 pounds per month. The company purchases all their tallow at the market here and turn out soap that competes in quality with any imported, and at the same price. The principal brands are Pale Savon, Pale Sapone, White Grecian and Pure Wax; as also various classes of toilet soap, such as Transparent Glycerine, Turkish, Cocoanut, Honey and Long Bar, and several others.

In England.—By courtesy of Brother H. S. Eldredge we have been enabled to peruse a letter to him, written at Leicester, England, from Elder John Howard. The latter says he has excellent health, and takes great pleasure in his labors. He has been instrumental in bringing a number of people into the Church, several of whom are now in Utah and others are expecting to leave England for here next spring. Elder Howard gives some details of the condition of the masses of the people, which is shown to be really lamentable.

United.—Elsewhere will be found a notice of the uniting in the bonds of wedlock of Mr. William McEwan and Miss M. E. Hawes, both of Provo. The happy bridegroom is the son of the late John McEwan, who was one of Utah's solid and respected citizens. The bride is the daughter of Amos Hawes, another substantial and well known citizen. The newly wedded pair have the congratulations and good wishes of a very large number of friends, with whom we join. May peace and prosperity be ever theirs.

RENEFACTORS. When a board of eminent physicians and chemists announced the discovery that by combining some well known valuable remedies, the most wonderful medicine was produced, which would cure such a wide range of diseases that most all other remedies could be dispensed with, many were sceptical, but proof of its merits by actual trial has dispelled all doubt, and to-day the discoverers of that great medicine, Hop Bitters, are honored and blessed by all as benefactors.
