TWO MORE TICKETS ARE TO BE MADE

Republicans and Democrats Will Name Their County Nominees Next Week.

GOSSIP ON POLICE SCANDAL.

Affair is Making "American" Party Managers Uneasy and to Many It Spells Certain Defeat.

The campaign for the fall state and county elections is rapidly approaching its height, so far as interest is concerned. There remains but two conconventions to be held, and these are the Republican and Democratic county conventions, scheduled for Monday and Wednesday of next week respectively.

Gossip at the various headquarters today is chiefly centered in prospective candidates for the county tickets, with the exception of "American" party headquarters. Here it is the case of Chief Sheets that holds the center of at-

The men in other parties who may have shown an interest in the matter are the subjects of bitter assaults. Certain it is from the trend of discus-sion that Chief Sheets fared luckly in having this tale come out at election

Instead of being heard on its merits, the chief finds many defenders who feel that they have got to stand by him for the sake of the party. His defender-in-chief, the Salt Lake Tribune had papers to give away today. There was a large defense of the chief as the leading detense of the chief as the leading article and for the first time recognition was taken of the fact that there is "sentiment" in existence, and the allegation was made that it was changing. Following usual Tribune custom there is but little of defense in the article. The Tribune style is counter assault instead of an honest defensiv attitude, and there is abuse and vituperation in this case on all those whom the Tribune can find in line for its mud batteries.

Facts which it is attempted to con-ceal by the process of drawing off pubceal by the process of drawing off public attention are those which no political party is conceded much of a right to defend, and which it is generally held, all good citizens would naturally combine on investigating, but would prefer a time when facts could not be selzed for making posts for political fences.

These are that a crook who repre-sented himself as an officer, and arrest-ed a victim, dared to lead this victim, ed a victim, dared to lead this victim, when he could not shake him, into the private office of the chief of police, to which he found access through a back door, instead of through police head-quarers and risk the telling of his victim's story to the chief. That the chief of police did not arrest the fake officer, and instead sent him out to get money to let the victim out of town, which the chief of police handled and turned over to the victim. That the victim was advised by the chief that there was little chance to get the $8.200 which was taken from him by officers, supposed to be searching officers, supposed to be searching him in the name of the law, and the $2,000 filshed in a fake card game. That

$2,000 filshed in a fake card game. That no attempt was made to investigate the gang, and that its members remained in town until the return here of the victims, who had ceased to trust the chief of police.

The gullibility of the McWhirters consisted in a simple faith in the law and its justice. They were credulous, and believed O'Brien when he told them he was a stranger here, and asked the way to the warm springs. They believed him again when he They believed him again when he said he had one relative here, who wanted to take him automobile riding over the city, and were credulous again when the latter invited them to go with him and his uncle. Later they were credulous in trusting the commands of supposed officers of the law, and still later they believed the chief of police, when he advised them in their misfortune, they looked up an attorney. Then they came back to make a fight for they looked up an attorney, they came back to make a fight for their money, and not through the office of the chief. This phase of the trouble of course will be threshed out in the courts, and privately in advance, people generally are waiting a full hearing before judging one way.

With the Tribune there is little sympathy on the streets today. It is too well known that Sheets was for years the privated etective of Thomas Kearns. It will be remembered that the Tribune printed a full and excedingly detailed printed a full and excedingly detailed report on every movement of Atty. Worthington of Washington, D. C. when he came here to investigate matters for Senator Smoot, during the first hearing of his case in Washington. Chief Sheets is said to be the man who followed him about. He was frequently seen in the vicinity of places where Mr. Worthington was visiting, prior to the publishing of the data. Instances have occurred where servants have become masters of their employers through obtaining information that have become masters of their employ-ers through obtaining information that it pays to keep silent. The query is generally made today as to whether any one in Salt Lake is master of Chief of the "Americans." It is noticeable that the Kearns personal power and influence is thrown bodily into the breach to defend the former private detective.

At Democratic party headquarters to-night a smoker will be held. This is the first of a series planned by Chairman Cunningham and Secy. Rollin W. Dole. Judge Powers and Judge King will do the talking, and a good time in the way of free smokes and refresh-

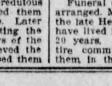

BURNED TO DEATH.

Shocking Fate of a Little Girl at Farmington Yesterday Afternoon.

(Special to the "News.")

Farmington, Oct. 6.—This community was thrown into sorrow today by the sad death of one of its children, who was burned to death yesterday afternoon. The child is Alta Hollist, aged 5 years. While playing round a bonfire on the grounds of the North Farmington schoolhouse, her clothes became ignited. Her mother, Mrs. Rachel Lovsey Hollist, was cleaning the schoolhouse and built a fire outside to heat water. She heard a scream from some children playing near by and rushed down to find her little daughter in flames, while her 7-year-old son. Clarence, was trying to extinguish them with his cap. The mother wrapped her daughter in (Special to the "News.")

7-year-old son, Clarence, was trying to extinguish them with his cap. The mother wrapped her daughter in her own skirts and succeeded in putting out the blaze. Her body and face, however, were badly burned, and the child was in fearful agony. She was carried to the residence of Frank King, where she died at 4 o'clock this morning. Dr. O. C. Dixon was called and did all he

AMUSEMENTS.

Tabernacle-Long experience has shown that it requires something out of the ordinary to draw a big audience at a concert in the tabernacle; that something out of the ordinary was furnished last night in the person of of Miss Emma Lucy Gates, who demonstrated again, as she has done so many times before, that her name is a magnet that may always be relied on to draw the throngs.

The lower floor of the tabernacle was well filled last night, probably between two and three thousand people being in attendance; the gathering was made up of city and country people in about equal proportions. The concert was an ideal one, though the handling of the crowds caused a delay of fifteen minutes in beginning, but the last number was sung before 10 o'clock. Encores were steadily refused, excepting in two instances, the duet between Miss Gates and Mr. Ensign, and Prof. McClellan's solo, where the ap-Prof. McClelian's solo, where the applause kept up so insistently that responses were literally forced. The great hit of the night was Miss Gates' rendition of the surpassingly difficult aria from "Traviata," "Ah Fors E Lui." This famous composition, justly counted as the great test for any coloratura soprano, and one rarely atempted except by the Pattis, Melbas and Sembrichs, was dashed off with an ease and a finish by Miss Gates which was electrifying, and at its close the audience responded in tumultuous fashion. The young lady was called back again and again to bow her acknowledge-The young lady was called back again and again to bow her acknowledgments. The "Angels Ever Bright and Fair," with an exquisite accompaniment by Prof. McClellan at the organ, showed fully the beauty of her sustained tones. The two French songs were characteristically fetching, but they need a smaller auditorium, and the accompanying action, to bring out their full purpose. The German number was another gem of feeling. "Oh That We Two Were Maying," was admirably rendered, as was the sprightly "Cuckoo" song, by Lehman. The concert ended with Miss Gates singing DeLibes' exquisite "Les filles de Cadiz." rendered in brilliant style. The "Rigoletto" duet was a success hardly second to the "Traviata" aria. One could not help wishing that the singers could throw their book away and induige in the acting that the deep sentiment of the selection seemed to call for.

Most efficiently was Miss Gates sup-ported by the other artists. Mr. En-sign's noble voice told out to full ad-vantage each time that he sang, though vantage each time that he sang, though his friends could have wished for something newer at his hands.

Prof. McClelian was in his very best mood, and gave three organ numbers with characteristic style and taste. Especially delicate was the old melody "Swanee River," and so stormily did the audience call for more that he rendered "Home, Sweet Home" in equally admirable fashion. The choir was down for one number, and it must have been as mortifying to Director Stephens as it was regrettable to the choir's friends, to see so poor a turnout in the male section. Hardly half of the singers there, were in their seats, and the consequence was that the Ernani number suffered heavily.

At the conclusion of the concert Miss-Gates' friends remained to offer their congratulations. She makes her her studies in the east.

In last night's audience were Mr. Stewart of the Stewart Opera company, the advance manager of Viola Gillette's company, and other traveling theatrical people. All followed Miss Gates' work with the most critical attention, and all stated to Manager Pyper of the theater at the close, that they saw no reason why she should not succeed in the line of grand opera work she has chosen to follow.

Theater-The attendance at the theater picked up last night, though it Theater—The attendance at the theater picked up last night, though it was still far from what it should have been. The attraction was the first rendition in this city of Victor Herbert's new opera "Babette," and it was admirably given throughout by the Stewart Opera company. As before, the costumes and scenery came in for special praise, and the musical renditions were of the highest order. Miss Day made a big hit in the part of Babette, and in the last act her singing contest with the flute called for any number of encores and expressions of pleasure. The others in the cast did clever work, and the singing of Mr. Hayden, the tenor, and the comedy work of Mr. Leslie are specially deserving of mention. The chorus and orchestra were as usual, bright especial features, and won a big number of plaudits, the dance which opens the last act being thoroughly charming.

The Stewart company's season winds up with presentations of "Babette" this afternoon and evening.
