

rolled themselves in battalions, and fought with unexampled bravery beside the men.— Conspicuous in the glorious array the figure of the maid of Saragossa rises to our vision, that lovely heroine immortalized by Byron's muse and Wilkie's pencil—she who took her place in the battery where her lover was slain, and with her own fair hands pointed the gun and applied the match, when the stern veterans fell back from the storm of shot and shell that poured upon them.

The Greek and Hungarian revolutions were illumined by such valiant examples of female heroism. Our own revolutionary annals are not without numerous instances of female courage displayed in the holiest of causes. It would require a large volume to record in the briefest manner the services that women have rendered in the hour of peril.

A Dutchman's Way of Telling the Truth.

Old Adam C——, a resident of the original German Flats, had a queer habit of making correct mistakes.

When about to sell rather an antiquated horse he was interrogated as to the age of the beast. "Vel," he replies, "I guess about nine over ten." In a short time the purchaser discovered the cheat, returned with the animal, and said:

"Mr. C——, what made you cheat me in selling this horse? Didn't you tell me he was nine or ten? and here he is twenty?"

"No, no: I sheats nobody. I say she is nine over ten; and she is all of dat."

At another time, when selling a balky horse, he was asked if his horse was true to pull, and good to drive. Old Adam says:

"I tell you, in de morning you gets your wagon out, and puts de harness on de horse good; hitch him fore de wagon good; take up de lines and vip, and tell him go. I tells you he is right dair every time."

The buyer departed satisfied; but after following directions he found him "right dair every time," and no amount of persuasion could induce him to change his position. The buyer of course returns the horse; but old Adam sheats nobody, he told him shust as it was.

"Having a quantity of wood that had been exposed to the weather till it had become spoiled, he wished to dispose of it. Taking a load to market, the customer inquired:

"Is it good wood? Will it split good?"

"Splitt? Yaw, splitt like a candle."

"Any one who has split candles can guess how the wood split. The next time Old Adam came to market, he was reproached for selling rotten wood; but 'Old Adam never sheats nobody; he te ls them shust as it was."
