was pleased to mingle among the people at Conference and partake of the spirit manifested by the brethren, in their private conversations and public utterances. He could perceive that if the people failed to take to themselves the portion of advice, instruction or rebuke, that was most adapted to their several positions, but little, if any, real profit would be derived from attending our Conference meetings. The wise would receive chastisement and mend their ways, while the thoughtless and the worldly minded would pass by re-gardiess of serious thought the words of life and salvation that come to us from time to time through the servants of God. And the faithfal would rejoice in whatever circumstances we might be placed in, knowing ing as they do that the Lord will rule and overrule in their behalf, and lead them through the flery ordeals that will eventually make them shine the brighter among the numerous family of our Father and God.

The speaker referred to the plauned attack that is being made by our enemies upon our children, and warned parents to use every effort to guide their children in the ways they should go until they themselves shall see and know as their parents do.
