

Jenson's Travels.

LETTER NO. XIV.

Monday June 17th.—A Portuguese servant which we had engaged the day before called for us at 6 o'clock A. M., and we started for the celebrated volcano on the summit of Mount Loa. The distance from Hilo to the volcano is thirty-one miles, and there is a first-class road built at the expense of the government, all the way. The road is supposed to be very good. The ride is very interesting as the road took us through well cultivated cane fields, coffee plantations, dense tropical forests, etc., etc. Such a variety of ferns as those seen along this road have been in all their glory before. They grow so luxuriantly that they are the size of tall trees. The ferns of the large species are very common, and the ferns of the smaller species are very common. The quality raised already ranks among the best in the world.

We arrived at the volcano house at 10:30 P. M. The day was rainy, but the volcano was protected against the wet in our covered carriage, we entered the volcano house, and the volcano was very much surprised to see us. The volcano is a very much surprised to see us. The volcano is a very much surprised to see us. The volcano is a very much surprised to see us.

Waiakoa, near Hilo, and drowned five persons. On November 20, 1880, a light was seen in the summit crater of Mount Loa. The next day a stream of lava made its appearance at a point 12,000 feet above the level of the sea, on the eastern slope of the mountain. It continued to flow for nine months, along the southern edge of the flow of 1855, and finally stopped three-fourths of a mile from the crater of Hilo, near the Hilo. Hilo, August 10th, 1881.

Again, in December 1880, there were frequent earthquakes in southern Hawaii. At length, on January 20th, 1881, five quakes of the summit of Mount Loa, and on the 27th, an earthquake took place in the district of Kilauea, at an elevation of 4,000 feet, and on the 28th, an earthquake took place in the district of Kilauea, at an elevation of 4,000 feet, and on the 29th, an earthquake took place in the district of Kilauea, at an elevation of 4,000 feet.

From the Volcano House, Hawaii's other great mountain Mauna Kea, the white mountain is also in clear sight, though its summit is over thirty miles away to the northwest. It has a number of peaks of hills, which give it a serrated appearance which is rivalled only by some even, regular or smooth outlines. The extent of Mauna Kea is not very difficult, and can be made in one or two days with good animals starting from the summit of Mauna Loa. The trail from here is generally to the east and up the mountain through groves of massive trees. The summit plateau is about five miles in extent. There the air is very cool and rarefied, and has a stupifying effect on both body and animal. A lake of fresh water is found on the summit which is often frozen around the edges in winter, but seldom, if ever, entirely frozen over. Its elevation is 14,920 feet, and it is the highest, it is among the very highest lakes in the world.

The Volcano House is in the district of Puna, which is embraced in the South Hawaiian conference. This conference comprises all the Saints residing in the districts of Puna, Kauai, South Kona and North Kona. The conference consists of eleven branches, containing a total membership of 217, including children under eight years of age. Of these are: Eureka, 7; Ikaika, 24; Teapehu, 10; in a few minutes, and the envoys went left, deathless and suffering. At the same time the crater of Kilauea stopped the flow of lava through underground fissures toward the south-west. The central part of the floor of the crater fell in, forming a pit 300 feet long and 100 feet deep with steep sides. On the 27th of April, 1881, the lava from the central crater of Mauna Loa burst out on the southwest slope of the mountain, in the land of Kilauea, at a point 5,000 feet above the sea. The lava erupted up in great quantities, several hundred feet high, and flowed to the sea, a distance of ten miles in two hours. This eruption continued only five days. It destroyed woods, houses and several hundred head of cattle and overflooded 2,000 acres of good land. Three men were imprisoned for several days on a hill surrounded by lava streams. On May 10th, 1877, a great earthquake wave was experienced on all the Hawaiian Islands, which washed away the village of

Some people always save a little; most people sometimes save something, and some people never save anything. The road to comfort lies more in what we save than what we make. Zion's Savings Bank was opened for two purposes: As an investment for those who established it and also as a place in which the people of Utah could safely deposit their money and receive a reasonable interest thereon. It is the Largest and Oldest Savings Bank in Utah, and the confidence reposed in it is attested by the fact that since the bank was instituted, 14,282 savings accounts have been opened. Deposits are received in any sum from $1 up.
