

EVENING NEWS.

Published Daily, Sunday Excepted,
AT FOUR O'CLOCK.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY THE DESERT NEWS COMPANY.

CHARLES W. FERROSE, EDITOR.

Monday, November 26, 1888.

EUROPEAN FOREBODINGS.

The rumors and dread of a gigantic European war will not down. Occasionally something will occur that causes momentary tranquility of feeling, but the forebodings of approaching disaster soon break out with more intensity than ever.

This falling of the hearts of men because of what they feel is approaching, partly because of the nature of a prophesy of the future. The crisis may be delayed by diplomatic manipulation of international affairs, but these operations must sooner or later fail to effect the maintenance of peace, war being the result of complications that cannot be avoided.

There are two standpoints from which the inevitability of war can be viewed. There is a natural one from which men give attention to the general affairs of the world can largely foresee the results of accumulating complications and conditions. The other is to view matters from a spiritual base. This latter position is confined strictly to religious who believe in the inspired utterances of Christ and many of the prophets who have pointed with the finger of revelation to a time of blood and carnage, and every crime, were perpetrated by neighbor upon neighbor. The sections from which the "Mormons" have been driven by mobs were preeminently those in which human passion and depravity seemed to have no limit, when the sword and the lance of the war, proving the effects which are produced, and which remain, in a community that permits mob law to prevail.

The momentary feeling of security felt in Europe because of the alleged peaceful tone of the speech of the Emperor William of Germany to the Reichstag has already vanished. The public journals of the continent are now pointing to the fact that William merely said that war would be avoided "to the best of our endeavors." They are also seeking to show that those "endeavors" will necessarily, in the nature of things, prove futile. Also that all the great powers, including Germany, are directing their attention to the business of placing themselves on a stronger war footing by taking steps to enable them to obtain its success. This indicates that while Emperor William says he will endeavor to avoid war he is preparing for it.

Perhaps England may be excepted from those powers which are negotiating loans, yet she is preparing by adding to her navy some of the most effective war ships that ever floated on water. This shows that while the British government took umbrage at General Wolsey's pointed public animadversions in relation to England's comparatively defenseless condition, they have promptly acted upon his suggestion.

Speculations are being indulged in by Germany in regard to the possibility of a conflict with Great Britain providing the former should vigorously prosecute the policy of territorial expansion adopted a few years ago. An enlarged Germany does in that case suggest in order to be prepared to protect and push her designs in relation to expansion. It is difficult for any nation to prosecute with vigor a policy looking to territorial aggrandizement without conflicting with English interests, as England has been acting for nearly a century as if to use a common phrase—she wanted the earth. She has some good way toward obtaining it.

While the locus of war has not been sounded in Europe, the prevailing sentiment seems to be one of insecurity, a looking forward for a conflict at no distant day. When it shall burst upon the nations its effects will be far-reaching, and will be felt in some way to the ends of the earth.

THE SAMOAN DIFFICULTY.

This situation on the Samoan Islands gets no better fast. The latest dispatches state that the two native rival claimants to the throne of Samoa, Tamaia and Matafao, are still at sword's point. It is not unlikely that a bloodshed fight has occurred between the rival factions on this.

The difference between the two parties is not the only difficulty existing upon these islands of the Pacific. Tamaia and Matafao are belligerent toward the English and American residents, and is backed in that attitude by Germany.

A TEMPESTUOUS HARVEST.

The following press dispatch indicates the existence of a condition in the section from which it emanates, that must be thoroughly corrected, or it will produce disastrous consequences:

New York, Nov. 21.—The World's Greenhouse, N. Y. The greatest excitement prevailed in Winston, owing to threats made by negroes of that place to mob the most prominent and influential democratic leaders for political activity at the polls on the day of the election. The following is a specimen of the cards received by these gentlemen:

"You are notified that you have ten days to leave this town. If you cannot be found here after that time you will be sworn to a limb and your house burned. COLORED CITIZENS."

In the Bible a figure is frequently used by which political wickedness is compared to crimes of individuals against humanity and to the crimes given to those crimes are often applied to the political immorality of the Israelitish nation. This Oriental metaphor is pregnant with philosophical significance; for there is a striking analogy between the conditions of a nation possessing a defined system of government, which permits the same to be subverted in a corrupt, wicked or violent manner, by its own citizens, and the state of a woman who has completely abandoned chastity. Both are vile, and each represents, among nations and individuals respectively, the lowest depth of degradation.

When a body politic lays aside law, and seeks to accomplish its wishes, or execute its vengeance, upon any portion of its own citizens without regard to just principles and restrictions, it becomes, in Scriptural metaphor, a harlot; and as the steps of such creatures lead down to hell, and as their course of life is productive of nothing but misery, so mob law is the seed of evil which ripens into a harvest of whirlwind.

If the government of North Carolina is not able to prevent one class of citizens from rising up and banishing another class, no matter how great the disparity of numbers between the two classes, then are the days of her peace numbered, and her prosperity near its end. She can preserve her political virtue only by protecting all her citizens from unlawful banishment or violence. When she, from any cause, no longer affords them that protection, her chastity as a commonwealth is compromised. So with any other state or nation.

Mob violence is a fearfully effective means of debauching public sentiment, hence of undermining public safety. A people who witness the continuance, and especially the triumph, of mobocratic methods, quickly lose all reverence for law, or respect for order; and with these there also disappears the fear of God. Hence individuals are left without those restraints on human action by which alone humanity can be controlled, and the prevalence of anarchy prevented.

Mobocracy multiplies the spirit of murder, and encourages the development in the community of all the evil passions. It makes men brutal, reckless, and treacherous, and kindles insatiable fires of lust and hate. During the war of the rebellion civilized modes of warfare were generally pursued, except in those regions where mobocracy had prevailed, to the extent of exterminating an important element of the population. In Missouri the most revolting and barbarous modes of carrying on the struggle were indulged in. The laws of civilized warfare were set at defiance, while murder, rapine, and destruction of property were common. In Missouri the most revolting and barbarous modes of carrying on the struggle were indulged in. The laws of civilized warfare were set at defiance, while murder, rapine, and destruction of property were common. In Missouri the most revolting and barbarous modes of carrying on the struggle were indulged in. The laws of civilized warfare were set at defiance, while murder, rapine, and destruction of property were common.

More than half a century ago Joseph Smith, the Prophet, declared that he believed in the power of faith does not exist among them as it did with the members of the primitive Church. They accepted the Bible, closed, and believed in part only.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

are kept apart, the object being to discourage matrimony. A strong religious sentiment holds the colonists together, and they present many characteristics which are quaint and curious. Their villages are described as being so old-fashioned and unique as to seem to belong to some past age.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

Evidences by Which the Church of Christ may be Known.

Religious services were held in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday, Nov. 25, 1888, commencing at 2 p.m., President Angus M. Cannon presiding. The choir sang:

The great and glorious gospel light has shined forth upon all mankind. Prayer by Elder John Cottam.

O Jesus! the giver of all we enjoy.

The Priesthood of the Eighth Ward officiated in the administration of the Sacrament.

ELDER JACOB F. WELLS Was the first speaker. He said he had learned early in life that it was vain for a person to endeavor to address the saints to their edification except he was inspired by the Holy Ghost. It is promised that where the Saints are assembled in the name of the Lord he will be there to bless them. It is a source of gratification to see many assemblies of the Saints, where they are gathered to worship God. They approach Him in confidence, understanding the relationship which exists. It is a marvel, in the midst of professed Christianity, to meet one who is an excommunicate of the church, and is governed by the precepts which he taught, who truly confesses that Jesus is the Savior of mankind, and prays in His name for salvation. The professors of so-called Christianity will admit that the power of faith does not exist among them as it did with the members of the primitive Church. They accept the Bible, closed, and believe in part only.

More than half a century ago Joseph Smith, the Prophet, declared that he believed in the power of faith does not exist among them as it did with the members of the primitive Church. They accept the Bible, closed, and believe in part only.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Latter-day Saints entered into their everyday life. It is to them dearer than all else in mortality. Without it their life is a blank. They know by their own experience that their whole existence is a mission for the establishment of the truth. The speaker knew by his own experience that this was the noblest life—where all was devoted to the kingdom of God. The practical workings of the Gospel had marked the Latter-day Saints as a people. The cause of this was that all the members of the church were called to be missionaries, and to preach the Gospel to all the world.

ized the Church, and are lacking today, as the apostles had been restored to it in its fullness. Elder Palmer bore a strong testimony to the restoration of the Gospel, and the Saints to live closely to its precepts. The choir sang the anthem:

Hear my prayer.

Benediction was pronounced by Elder H. P. Richards.

TO-DAY'S TELEGRAMS.

The Washington Circuit of the Associated Press Completely Prostrated.

Terrible Loss of Life and Property by the Eastern Storms.

A Report That Jay Gould Has Purchased the A. T. & S. F. Telegraph Lines.

The Knights—Terrible and Distressing Fatal Explosion.—Other Points.

By Telegram to the News.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Duchess of Sutherland is dead.

John Bright.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—John Bright had a restless night. His lungs are in a worse condition this morning, temperature higher.

1 p.m.—Bright grows hourly worse.

Newspaper Offices Burned.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Nov. 26.—The offices of the Evening News and Country Journal were burned; £100,000. The offices were the finest in Australia.

Plans for Emma's Relief.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—Lieut. Wisman will wait on the Emperor to resign his commission in the army and state his plans for the Emma relief expedition.

Indicted.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—The grand jury has indicted Thomas Tallma, cashier of the defunct Traders' Bank, on the charge of embezzlement for accepting $200,000 in bonds knowing the bank to be insolvent.

The Manchester Martyrs.

DUBLIN, Nov. 26.—Thousands of persons attended the demonstration in Glasnevin cemetery yesterday at the monument to the Manchester martyrs. The proceedings were orderly.

Freedom for Slaves.

ZANZIBAR, Nov. 26.—The question regarding a fugitive harbored by the mission station at Mombasa has been settled to the satisfaction of the natives. The arrangement secures freedom to 1500 slaves.

Increased Duties.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 26.—Import duties on sheet copper have been increased thirty kopecks per pound. The duty on copper-bottom wooden ships has been fixed at twelve roubles for the first hundred tons and six for every additional hundred tons.

Terrible Loss of Life.

SCITINATE, Mass., Nov. 26.—Terrible loss of life reported here by a wrecked schooner. A large fishing schooner, Edward Norton, went ashore on first Cliff Point at 6:30 last night and was wrecked. The schooner was crew consisted of sixteen men, and 15 perished.

Another Purchase.—On Trial.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—It is reported that Jay Gould has bought the telephone lines of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Company for $200,000. John Anderson, charged with conspiring to blow up Judges Garry and Grinnell, made up a way of Buffalo, Cleveland, and Toledo, was put on trial today. The other conspirators, Cleburne, and Capen will be tried separately.

The Awful Storm.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The first storm of the winter is about over in this vicinity, but is still raging with unabated violence along the New England coast. The storm was a terrible one with that section is entirely suspended. The Western Union has no service from New York to New Orleans, thus shutting off all southern points. The Associated Press' Washington office was cut off from the rest of the world. The storm along the coast was very violent, and it is feared many marine disasters have occurred, although it will not be known until reports come to come in. The storm would drive vessels off the shore, and the last message received from that place stated that the highest wind ever experienced by the observer is there raging.

STILL THE STORM.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The Western Union succeeded at noon in opening communication with Philadelphia. Wires were at that time working with Philadelphia. The Associated Press has at this time still been cut off from the rest of the world. The storm along the coast was very violent, and it is feared many marine disasters have occurred, although it will not be known until reports come to come in. The storm would drive vessels off the shore, and the last message received from that place stated that the highest wind ever experienced by the observer is there raging.

The East African Question.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—The government rejected France's proposal for the blockade of East Africa on condition that slave shows and dealers under the French flag should be allowed to remain in the country. The French government handed over to France for punishment.

The Miners' Strike to Appear.

DUBLIN, Nov. 26.—Edward Harrington, M.P., failed to appear today in answer to the summons charging him with inciting to violence to adopt the plan of campaign through his paper, the Kerry Sentinel. His counsel applied for a postponement in order that Harrington should attend the sitting of the Parliamt commission in London.

Fatal Explosion.

Last Night's Dispatches.

Bright No Better.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Bright is no better.

An M. P. Dead.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Percival O'Gorman, formerly a member of Parliament for Waterford City, is dead.

The Big Walk.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Forty-one men started on a six-day tramp at Madison Square garden tonight. Eight thousand persons were present.

The Pope's Congratulations.

ROME, Nov. 26.—The Pope has instructed Cardinal Gibbons to congratulate Mr. Harrison on his election to the presidency.

Perhaps He Is Willing.

ROME, Nov. 26.—Boulangier's wife is taking steps to obtain a divorce. It is stated that one of the richest widows in France is willing to marry Boulangier.

Honoring Headquarters.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 26.—The memory of Thomas A. Hendricks was honored today on the third anniversary of his death by memorial services over the graves conducted by the Hendricks Club of this city.

The Champion Garman.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—O'Connor, the orator who defeated Tenter yesterday, will leave here about the middle of the week for San Francisco, where he expects to sail for Australia to break the crack rowers of that country.

Relief of Emma Boy.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—Fifty members of the Emma relief committee held a meeting today. It was unanimously decided to send Lieut. Weissmann as soon as possible to the court in Vienna to prepare to equip a supporting column of which he will have command.

Slave Shows Captured.

SCARIN, Nov. 26.—The British recently captured several slave shows after a severe fight in which many persons were wounded. The Italian government claims possession of the shows on the ground that they were captured in waters of Italian jurisdiction.

A Quiet Day.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 26.—This has been a quiet day since the election. In the forenoon he attended church as usual and after dinner went out for a long walk. There were no visitors at the house today.