The business connection of Messrs. Point was given to that idea as Mr. Varian appeared at the City Hall on November 4th, and took part in the liberation of Irons on bail. It became necessary, because of intima tions that had been thrown out, for District Attorney Dickson to make a display of zeal in prosecuting the accused. In the preliminary examination against Irons and Fowler, which closed on Nov. 15th, and was conducted in semi-privacy, he appeared all that could be desired as a public prosecutor. His zeal was al least equalled by what he displays of that quality when he is running down a "Mormon" for the offense of living with his wives, or when he exhibits characterstic manly anxiety to have a delicate "Mormon" woman sent , to jall for declining
