A CARD.

To the Inhabitants and purchasing Community of this Territory:—

Owing to the great decline in the prices of goods in the Eastern Markets (being determined to keep IN RATIO with them,) I have made a further reduction in the prices of goods, which upon examination will speak for themselves. I have also on hand a great many articles that have laid over for one and two years, which I will sell, REGARDLESS OF COST, even lower than the present rates in the Eastern Markets will permit of; viz: Table and Pocket Cutlery, Spades, Shovels, Scythes and Snaths, Bake Skillets, Locks and Latches, Tea and Table Spoons, Carriage Bolts, Cast, Blister and Plough Steel, Soap, Lye, Tobacco, and an immense variety of other goods, which are necessities for every day use. Farmers and Country Merchants would do well to call and examine the stock and prices, and as Greenbacks are scarce in the country, I will take for pay, Cattle, Wheat, Flour, Barley, Oats, Pork, &c., for which I will give a price that will guarantee satisfaction.

EAGLE EMPORIUM

THROWING ACROSS THE RIVER
On the banks of the Hudson river, in one of the villages that dot its shores, a lot of idlers were standing, seeing which could throw stones the furthest into the stream. A tall, raw-boned, slab-sided Yankee, and no mistake, came up and looked on. For a while he said nothing, till a fellow in a green jacket, the leader of the party, and con-betted troth of a boy, began to try his wit on Jonathan.

"You can't come that," said he, as he hurled a stone away out into the river. "Maybe not," said Jonathan, "but up our country we've a pretty big river, considering, and 't'other day I hove a man clear across it, and he came down fair and square on the other side."

"Ha, ha, ha!" yelled his auditors.
"Well, now yew may laff, but I kin doo it again."

"Do what?" said the green jacket, quickly.
"I can take and hove you across that river yonder just like open and shut."

"But you kin doo it on?"
"Done," said the Yankee, and drawing forth an X (upon a broken down cast-iron) he covered the bragger's shirt-belt.

"Kin you swim, teller?"
"Like a duck," said green jacket; and without parley the Vermonter seized the Yorker stoutly by the nape of the neck, and the basement of his pants, jerked him from his foot hold, and with an almost superhuman effort dashed the bulky heels over head from the bank some ten yards into the Hudson.

A terrible shout rang through the crowd as he floundered in the water, and amidst the jeers and screams of his delighted companions the ducked bully put back to shore and scrambled up the bank, half-frozen by his sudden and involuntary cold bath.

"I'll take that ten spot, if you please," said the shivering loafer, advancing rapidly to the stake-holders. "You took us for greenhorns, eh? We'll show you how to do things down here in York," and the fellow claimed the twenty dollars.

"Waal, I reck'n yew wun't take no ten spots just yit, cap'en?"
"Why? You have lost the bet?"
"Not exactly. I didn't calculate on deuin' it the first time, but I kin doo it," and in spite of the loafer's utmost efforts to escape him, he seized him by the scuff and seat of his overalls and pitched him three yards further into the river than upon the first trial.

Again the bully returned amidst the shouts of his mates; who enjoyed the sport immensely.
"Third time, never fails," said the Yankee stripping off his coat; "I kin doo it I tell yew."

"Hold on!" said the almost petrified victim.
"And I will doo it if I try till to-morrow mornin'!"

"I give up!" shouted the sufferer between his teeth, which chattered like a mad badger's, "take the money!"
The Vermonter, very coolly, pocketed the ten spot, and as he turned away remarked:

"We ain't much acquainted with your smart folks daown here in York, but we sometimes take the starch out of 'em up our way; and p'raps, yew wun't try it onto strangers agin. I reck'n yew won't," he continued, and putting on a broad grin of good-humor, he left the company to their reflections.

BREVITIES.
Garibaldi is resigned, but melancholy. Enormous supplies of guano have been discovered in South Carolina.

Paris has a newspaper called The Atheist—a Journal of New Ideas. Gough is to lecture eighty times in Chicago.

The Bishop of Quebec will not allow prayers for the Manchester Fenians. Fernando Wood and Oakes Ames are the richest men in Congress.

Capital punishment is under debate in the French Senate. Ten deaths to one birth is the ratio among the negroes on the Florida islands.

A sister of one of the victims of the Angola disaster has become hopelessly insane. In the shipyards of Newburyport, Mass., the most skillful carpenters earn only $1.50 a day.

There are six deaths per annum for every five hundred people in the United States. The marks of pen-and-ink may be made indelible by passing the tongue over it. Even breathing slowly over the lines protects them from erasure.

One of the negro orators in the Louisiana Convention threatened to thrash a reporter the other day, for not reporting his speech faithfully.

Dysphoid and scarlet fever are prevalent all over New York State and in the Western States. Doctors say there has seldom been a time when deaths were so frequent from these complaints as at present.

Special theatre trains are now run from the neighboring towns to Boston for the express purpose of carrying persons to the places of amusement in the latter city. The fare on these trains is reduced.
