

SOCIETY

The week's social record is the largest of the season, each day having been filled with brilliant events, dominated by the omnipresent wedding. Next week will follow, a large number of affairs being scheduled. The largest affair will be the social gathering of the Daughters of Pioneers at Calder's park on Monday, the notable program provided promising to attract a great throng.

A happy gathering of Thursday was that at the home of Melville M. Miller of Mill Creek, a large party being summoned there early in the evening to partake of the host's generous hospitality. The guests, about 100 in all, were seated at a long table under the trees and enjoyed a thoroughly good time in a genuinely social way. A bounteous feast was among the features of the day, the table being bright with flowers, and the entire event most enjoyable. Among those who participated were the First Presidency of the Church of the Latter-day Saints, members of the twelve apostles and other prominent officials of Granite stake, including President F. Y. Taylor, George M. and John M. Cannon, T. Hill and others.

Among the pleasant affairs of the week was the celebration party given by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McMillan in honor of their first wedding anniversary, a number of friends being bidden. The decorations were all done in cotton, the colors being green and white in imitation of those used at their wedding. Curtains of cotton were hung in the dining room, and cotton water lilies decorated the table and hung from the chandelier above. Punch was served from a table done in American beauty roses, with Miss Lucille Seare presiding. Others who assisted were Col. and Mrs. Alfred Kent, Mrs. Bonnemont and Mrs. Jack Alford. The invited guests were, Bishop F. S. Spalding, Mrs. J. S. Spalding, Dean and Mrs. Benjamin Brewster, Dr. and Mrs. A. A. Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Craig, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Rowe, Mrs. William Spury, Mrs. E. Bonnemont, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Jeffries, Mrs. H. N. Needer, Mrs. Lloyd, Mrs. Fred Price, Mrs. M. H. Osborne, Mr. and Mrs. John Treweek, Miss Lucille Seare.

Mrs. J. E. Scallion and Miss Scallion were hostesses at an informal luncheon on Thursday, the decorations being in red, and covers laid for 19 guests.

A unique event of the week was the "stag" party on Thursday night given by Miss Irma Clawson, her guests consisting entirely of girl friends in various forms of male attire. There were club swells in "swallow tails," "duke sweaters" in the same, cow boys, farm hands, college boys and sailors, all picturesque and effective in their make-up. The parlor was decorated in semblance of a college boy's den, college pennants being strung from corner to corner, while all about the room were college emblems and colors. The dining room was in white and green, with shamrocks strung above the table, while the chandelier and walls were decked with green leaves, and the menu carried out the two colors. The place cards held tokens appropriate to the event, and these were drunk in ginger ale, each guest making a response. A college game was played and a prize awarded Miss Sybil Foote. No girl names were recognized, each responding to a boy name assumed for the evening. The best sustained character perhaps was that of the "duke sweeper," by Miss Della Wilson, who made a distinct hit with her characterization. The hostess in her picturesque cowboy costume, and Miss Daisy Vincent in dress suit with tall hat were charming enough to have turned the heads of all the opposite sex, had they been permitted to participate in the event, and the others would have created a decided sensation. Following are the names of the guests with their party sobriquets: Irma Clawson—"Ike," Teresa Taylor—"Ted," Margaret Warner—"Max," Clara Foote—"Chic," Della Wilson—"Dave," Sybil Foote—"Sid," Maude Cummings—"Mike," Kate McQuarrie—"Ken," Daisy Vincent—"Dick," Chloe Young—"Cal," Irene Hunter—"Ray," Giren Knowlton—"Gus."

About 20 guests entertained at bridge on Thursday by Mrs. W. W. Armstrong, the prizes going to Mrs. Frank Swindler and Mrs. N. A. Ranshoff. Red roses were used in the decorations.
