He says, In part: "We know that you are anx-lous that your teachers shall be well qualified for their work. They should y all means come in contact with the oremost educators and with the best known methods of teaching. . . . In answer to the requests of the super intendents, arrangements have been mad to keep the normal training school open for two weeks, and we are now eager that the best use shall be made of the opportunities offered."

EMINENT LECTURERS.

The institute has been very fortunate securing the services of such eminent durers as Dr. Vincent, Mrs. Norton and Miss Newlin. Of the latter, Prof. 8. H. Clark, who was recently here, speaks as follows, in a letter to Prof. Stewart:

"I desire very heartily to commend the work of Miss Jessie L. Newlin, who an instructor in university college o he University of Chicago, and who has been for many years my assistant. There is no one who is so thoroughly competent to represent me in the ped-agogy of reading as Miss Newlin. The s of Utah have an unusual op-ty to study this vital problem pedagogy with one who is a master the subject, and I sincerely trust by will avail themselves of it."

SENIORS MAKE MERRY.

L. D. S. U. Students Rendered a Hilarious Burlesque Program Last Night.

The seniors of the L. D. S. university gave their program last evening in Barratt hall. Almost every seat in the building was occupied with students and friends curlous as to what was to happen.

Their program consisted for the most part in a burlesque of the faculty, interspersed with humorous papers, songs and end-men's jokes, though they managed to square accounts with the juniors, who occupied conspicuous places in the front rows. They held what was supposed to be a reception, at which several members of the faculty, chosen for their ease of representation, were the chief guests. The audience were convulsed with laughter during the progress of this part, especially when "Prof. Hinckley" came in carrying his twins, and when "Dr. Miller". entered, a small man about three feet high, anxiously enquiring whether his host Bessie M. It only a stepping out into a bigger and a better institution for learning and for better institution for learning and for opportunity. It is time now for you to go into that higher institution, and while here are many excellent schools in this community, with some of which I have the honor to be connected, there is one school which belongs to us all, which the community has endowed and equipped for you, and it is the High school of this city. One thing I should like to urge on you every one, and that is, don't try to begin the battle of life before you are ready for it. Stay boys before you are ready for it. Stay boys and girls, as long as you can. Equip yourselves for the great problems of life while you may, for be sure that the greatest economic questions of the world will be yours for solution in the next 50 years. You are the people who will take up those questions and the more and deeper education you bring to them the better fitted will you be for

Music was a strong feature of the evening, aside from the musical recita-tions. One number, "Lift Thine Eyes," from "Elijah." was so well ren-dered by a chorus of mixed voices from the Webster school that the audience demanded an encore. The Washing-ton contributed an original oration, "The American Student," by Miss Min-nie Brim. It was clever, fairly brist-ling with assurance of our country's greatness. The class poem of the Sumner was recited in concert. The address of welcome by Wallace Woolf of the Bryant, was another clever, original effort. Winnifred de Vleming original effort. Winnifred de Vleming of the Fremont gave a piano solo, her selection being the well known "Dance of the Demon." "The Legend Beauti-full" was recited by Miss Rowena Korns of the Emerson, and a girls' double trio from the Franklin gave Weber's "Mer-maid's Song." A musical recitation, "The Last Hymn." was given by the Hamilton school class. Marjorie Brooks of the Lowell played Raff's "Cavatina" as a violin solo. The Marching Drill of the twelve girls from the Jackson and the "Anvil Chorus." as given by the same school, were excellent features. same school, were excellent features. Albert Carrington of the Union played a piano solo, "Canzonetta," with exa piano solo, "Canzonetta," with ex-quisite taste and touch. Another beau tiful solo was "Traumeri, by Frank Williams of the Wasatch, a promising young violinist. The Lincoln school ntributed a musical recitation, "Rock Ages." The Oquirrh's series of of Ages." The Oquirrb's series of Tableaux were excellent and won hearty applause. The closing number was another musical recitation by the Grant school, ending with the entire chorus singing "America." The musical part of the evening was under the direction of Prof. Wetzell. Everynumber excited admiration, except the musical recitations which, for some
