He Declines to Withdraw James De vine's Appointment After Having Given His Promise to Him

A little lesson in common courtesy was extended to the majority of the city council last night by President Davis assisted by Councilman Fernstrom, and the coup was so quickly and neatly done that the disciples of the "inne. circle" stood aghast when they lounged leisurely into the council chamber a few minutes afterward to find that there vas no session being held.

For many months it has been the habit of most of the majority members to leave their seats immediately after the council is called to order and lounge in and out of the mayor's office and ante-rooms, leaving for the president of the council and the minority dent of the council and the minority members to hold down the session until the dreary bpening part is gone through with. No idea that any corrections might be needed in the minutes ever seems to have entered their heads, and to avoid the weary routine has in the past actuated the majority to "sluff" the reading of the minutes on to the pa-tient minority and the president of the council, who is forced to stick by his post.

FERNSTROM'S JOKE

Last night council had not been in session 15 minutes before the cagle eye session 15 minutes before the cagle eye of Councilman Fernstrom perceived that there was no quorum present dur-ing the reading of the minutes. Presi-dent Davis-had waited until 8:15 be-fore beginning the session in order to permit the members of the "American" majority to come in and take their seats. But at the moment Councilman Fernstrom raised to his point of order the henchmen of the "Inner circle" were all absent, with the exception of Councilman Raybould. of Councilman Raybould.

MAYOR UNSHAKEN.

There was something doing, besides merely wishing to avoid the humdrum of minute-reading, last night, which induced the majority members to stay induced the majority memoers to stay away. Mayor Bransford had returned from the coast and had declared that he proposed to stay by his appointment of James Devine as chief of the fire department to the last ditch. The ma-jority members had something on foot, and it was to labor with his worship the mayor with tears and supplications to recant his nomination—but to no avail. No wonder that the time slipped by unnoticed. The mayor was obdu-rate. "The people elected me mayor of this city," declared Mr. Bransford, "and 1 propose to be mayor, and I do not propose to resign, either. Any party that wants me to sacrifice my honor and go back on my word. I am not with that party. The council agreed to stand by me in appointing James De-vine, and I am going to stay with him." Mayor Bransford had returned away who should have been attending to city business in the council chamber, buf-feted about by the determined and fully aroused mayor. And meanwhile the sonorous voice of Recorder Moreton was heard wading through the dry mass of .ninutes of the former session in the council room.

MOTION CARRIES.

"Mr. President, I rise to a point of order," said Councilman Fernstrom. "State your point," replied President Davis in the now thoroughly interested circle. The newcomer was deluged with questions, and each he answered in a clear and concise manner, showing a thorough knowledge of the Beeblive state and her people. The inquisitors were told wholesome truth about Mor-mons and Mormonism, the conversation lasting until late in the night. Before the travelers went to their berths they shook hands cordially with their newly found friends and ex-pressed thanks over and over again for the enlightenment they had received upon a subject with which they admit-ted they were only vaguely informed. The two recipients of good wishes were George H. Fisher, a merchant of Bancroft, Idaho, and his brother-in-law, F. B. Ellsworth. Mr. Fisher was on his way to Den-ver to attend the National Democratife convention. He performed a mission

Mr. Fisher was on his way to Den-ver to attend the National Democratic convention. He performed a mission to the Hawaiian Islands a number of years ago, and while there spent six weeks in a leper's colony. He was surrounded night and day by 1,100 lep-ers, yet says he had no fear at any time of contracting the disease. Speak-ing of the incident on the observation car, Mr. Fisher said: "I can't sit by and hear a good state and its people slandered. I dislike to push myself into the presence of strangers, but slander I cannot toler-ate. Timidity and diffidence are in-excusable that would permit one to sit by while wrong statements are be-ing made and false impressions created. I consider the person allowing slander to go without protest as being little less blameless than the slanderer him-self."
