

The feature of her act will be a round of taking songs which she sings from an airship sailing around the stage.

With some new pictures, and special selections by the most popular phonograph, the bill should prove more attractive than any previous bill this season.

Walter Arlington announces that he will give a scene production of "Qui Vadis" at the Bungalow all next week. He has made special arrangements with the players to sing and stage-train. It will be a severe test of the strength of his company, but he says that he is willing to abide by the public's verdict.

Few books have created a greater stir in both religious and secular worlds than this wonderful novel of the last winter. It is a gripping story of persecutions of the early Christians by Nero and his followers. There have been many stage versions, some mediocre, and some remarkably good. Mr. Arlington thinks he has excelled the best. It follows closely the story opening with Nero's drunken revel, where the beautiful Vestal is discovered in and insulted by Vindictus, from whom it is known she is rescued by the giant Uras.

John Ince, as Vindictus, will have the best part in which he has been seen since coming to Salt Lake, and one for which his fine physique and clever acting will fit him. Miss Bertha Creighton will play Ruth and Miss Arlington, the play's author. Many of the members of the company have played in the piece before and all will be well cast. It is said a special surprise is in store in the rendition of the role of Nero by Harold Kennedy.

Following that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House." The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

The dramatization of Mrs. Mary J. Higgins' "Lena Rivers" which has been receiving great favor elsewhere and which is to be seen at the Colonial all next week, is said to be cleverly arranged. Of course Lena is the central figure, and around her are grouped all of the familiar characters of the book. There is dear old Granny Higgins, pretty and jealous Caroline, the old maid Nancy, Scrooge, the beloved Belmont, the handsome young southwest. Then there are the two architectors, Mrs. Graham and Mrs. Livingstone, the witty old negro Rastus and his wife Aunt Debbie; the unhappy, yet loving John Graham and Anna, the pretty sister of Caroline. Mrs. Graham moves through the piece, and so does the village bumpkin Jim Shore. The play is meant to command it, inasmuch as it is clean and wholesome, tells a most interesting story, and has a delightful and refreshing atmosphere.

After "Lena Rivers" the Colonial will begin a continuous run of 24 weeks of "combinations," or, as they are better known, "Road Shows," during which the following companies will appear: International Grand Opera company, "The Red Mill"; "David Higgins"; "The Right of Way"; "Strongheart"; "Babes in Toyland"; "Commencement Days"; "In Wyoming"; "Time, Place and Girl"; May Howard, "Girl at the Helm"; Paul Gilmore, "Cat and Fiddle"; Bernice, "Kid Duds"; "In Dreamland"; "Little Johnnie Jones"; "Gingerbread Man"; "Knight for a Day"; "Land of Nod"; "Too Many Wives"; "Sunny Side of Broadway"; "Lion and Mouse"; "Honeymooners"; Max Figman, "The Girl Question"; "The Girl From Rector's"; "The Sports"; "Sweet Innisfallen"; "The Virginian"; "Brewster's Millions."

Tonight the Willard Mack company wind up a successful week in "The Girl of the Golden West," which has brought new laurels to the brows of Miss Blanche Douglas.

Next week she will have another opportunity, on August 1, Thomas' comedy entitled, "The Other Girl." The leading character in the play, however, is that of Kid Garvey, a professional prize fighter, who gets into society rather above him and involves himself in a hopeless tangle. The part is founded on the famous Kid McTroy and was originally created in New York by young Bert Baker. Next week, of course, fall to Mr. Mack, who gave the play its first stock presentation three years ago in Duluth.

Miss Douglas will have the part of "the girl," as she has always done of late, and the role is one well fitted to her style. Mr. Allen, Mr. Ronne, Mr. Bowden and the other members will all have suitable parts.

There will be the usual matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Miss Eleanor Gordon, who headlines the new bill at the Orpheum, is on her first vaudeville tour, and her vehicle is a bright racing comedy, "Tips on Tips," by Eddie and Alie Williams. It is full of situations and strong lines, and tells the story of a woman who takes her husband's pockets for racing tips, on which she plays.

"La Petite Revue" is a novel handling of an old idea, brought down to date, a review of old and new theatrical successes presented in an original fashion.

The Walthour Trio of bicyclists and acrobats are considered one of the foremost novelties of their kind to be seen anywhere.

The Five Avoles, European xylophonists are the premier in their line of work, and they have a large collection of tuneful and carefully chosen compositions.

Lena Pantzer, assisted by Sam Mintz, has a novelty dancing act, in which she dances "all over the place," on the floor, on a spindle and on the wire.

Davey & Poney Moore have a pretty little comedy which they call "The Dancing Tandem."

Little Millie Williams is a 501 ladies singer who will need no introduction.

SCENE FROM LEONA RIVERS.
At the Colonial Theater All Next Week.

Hackett. It came up in the supreme court yesterday, says a New York paper, but exactly what the suit is about could not be learned from the men in papers.

The annual autumn melodrama at Drury Lane in London has been produced. This year its scenes for bearing a scent of collision on a railroad and another at Epsom with the race for the 2,000 guineas. The title is "The Great Divide."

Stories current along the street last week to the effect that Mrs. Leslie Carter would become the leading woman of Fred Belasco's stock company at Los Angeles were denied later by Mrs. Carter. Preparations for her appearance in New York in a new play, it was said, were going on uninterrupted.

Julia Dean, from a show steamship approaching Liverpool, writes: "What a splendid cure for tired, nervous people! I have had nine days of perfect rest, lots of fresh air, some exercise, no powder on face nor fat in hair, regular meals and tons of sleep, and stayed away from people."

Charles Frohman announces that he will give a scene production of "Qui Vadis" at the Bungalow all next week. He has made special arrangements with the players to sing and stage-train.

It will be a gripping story of persecutions of the early Christians by Nero and his followers.

There have been many stage versions, some mediocre, and some remarkably good.

Mr. Arlington thinks he has excelled the best.

It follows closely the story opening with Nero's drunken revel, where the Vestal is discovered in and insulted by Vindictus, from whom it is known she is rescued by the giant Uras.

John Ince, as Vindictus, will have the best part in which he has been seen since coming to Salt Lake, and one for which his fine physique and clever acting will fit him.

Miss Bertha Creighton will play Ruth and Miss Arlington, the play's author.

Many of the members of the company have played in the piece before and all will be well cast.

It is said a special surprise is in store in the rendition of the role of Nero by Harold Kennedy.

Following that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the season, "The Third Degree," the last sensational success from the pen of Mr. Klein, author of "The Lion and the House."

The play runs here during fair and conference week, and our old friend Paul Everett, who twice headed "The Lion and the Mouse" company in this city has the leading role.

That follows that comes another of the big headliners of the