

freeze! Aye there was a rub! Two buckets were inserted in an old tub, which leaked all the water out as fast as the ice melted. We vainly endeavored to fill up the huge interstices with rags in order to save the ice, and then set a few of our most valued brethren to turning those pails back and forth, back and forth. No one with any sensibility would have regretted the paltry dollar and a half laid out in ice for the sake of the amusement afforded to the

of Lake. Even the white babies were persistent in their efforts to observe their fathers employed in useful labor, and some one was constantly busy herding the darlings off the porch into the quiet obscurity of an inner room. From two to three hours consumed in this manner and a unanimous vote declared the stuff frozen as much as time, muscle and ice would permit. In fact, it was soon discovered that the cream was doubling on us, so to speak, and coming back to its original state. Accordingly all hands and the babies gathered round the table, spoons and dishes rattled, the slushy mash was ladled out, and we, endeavoring to fancy ourselves and cake. The cake, unlike the ice-cream was a success. When we closed up accounts that night, we still had one bucket of cold custard, which afterwards assisted in the composition of a rice pudding, I believe.

Mangoes have come and gone, like a beautiful dream. Likewise, oheas. The mill work is all done for this season, and several of the brethren are now engaged in putting up a warehouse on the beach at Lake Molok. The building is of corrugated iron. It is to hold the sugar, which will be hauled there in milling time, by the wagons just purchased, and stored, day by day, thus doing away with the very inconvenient method of shutting down work in the mill for a day, and men and swarms of ox teams being set to haul sugar to the beach, while the ship waited for the cargo. A little landing will also be put out into the water to pile sacks on and prevent their becoming wet in the surf as they are loaded in the boat.

I understand President King intends building a new blacksmith shop (a thing sadly needed for storage of tools and blacksmith work) near the site of the old one, just as soon as the warehouse is up.

There is a very good, quiet, peaceful spirit here, and and sustain our kind President in his earnest, energetic endeavors to make this mission a success. We expect some of our number will be leaving us this fall, but even then, there will be quite a few of us left. We had a very spirited celebration of the Twenty-fourth, under the immediate direction of Brother E. Barrell, assisted by Bro. James Oswald and the Presidency of the Y. M. & Y. L. M. I. A. A very nice feast, and excellent meeting were followed by amusements in the afternoon. All felt well and repaid for their efforts. As usual,

AN ENGLISHMAN'S COMMENTS.

He Describes Society and the Press in America.

DAVIS COUNTY, Sept. 3d, 1887.

Editor Deseret News:

About forty-five years ago a distinguished traveler and writer took notes in America, and, as I happened at the same period to be traveling in about the same localities as he, and being about the right age to begin to take in the political, moral, social and religious status of our great and growing republic, I was forcibly impressed with the remarkable courage with which he recorded details of matters and things generally, and prominent national characteristics of the people particularly, and should like, if you can afford space, for the benefit of the many readers of your valuable paper, to make a few quotations from his conclusions. Though some of them are not particularly flattering to the people of that period, yet the old saying is good: "The reproaches of a friend are better than the kisses of an enemy." Peradventure we of to-day may discover which way we are traveling in our national affairs and at what rate of speed.

First, I will quote briefly from the

GOOD FEATURES.
Speaking of the general character of the American people and their social system, he says: "They are, by nature, frank, brave, cordial, hospitable and affectionate.

These qualities are natural, I implicitly believe, to the whole people. That they are, however, sadly sapped and blighted in their youth among the mass; and that there are influences at work which endanger them still more, and give but little present promise of their present restoration, is a truth that ought to be told."

Now come

SOME OF THE BAD FEATURES.
"One great blemish in the popular mind of America, and the prolific parent of an innumerable brood of evils, is universal distrust. You carry this jealousy and distrust into every transaction of public life. By repelling worthy men from your legislative assemblies, it has bred up a class of candidates for the suffrages who, in their every act, disgrace your institutions and your people's choice. Any man who attains a high place among you, from the President downwards, may date his downfall from that moment; for any printed lie that any notorious villain pens, although it militate directly against the character and conduct of a life, appeals at once to your distrust and is believed. You will strain at a gnat in the way of truthfulness and confidence, however fairly won and well deserved; but you will swallow a whole caravan of camels, if they be laden with unworthy doubts and mean suspicions. Another prominent feature is the love of 'smart' dealing, which gilds over many a swindle and gross breach of trust and many a defalcation, public and private, and enables many a knave to hold his head up with the best who well deserves a halter."

After dilating upon a third prominent feature, denominated "the love of trade," he

TOUCHES UPON THE PRESS

as follows:
"But the foul growth of America has a more tangled root than this, and it strikes its fibres deep in its licentious press. While the newspaper press of America is in or near its present abject state, high moral improvement is hopeless. Year by year it must and will go back; year by year the tone of public feeling must sink lower down; year by year the Congress and the Senate must become of less account before all decent men; and year by year the memory of the great fathers of the revolution must be outraged more and more in the bad life of their degenerate child.

Among the best of journals which are published, there are some, the reader need scarcely be told, of character and credit. But the name of these are few, and of the others legion; and the influence of the good is powerless to counteract the mortal poison of the bad. When any man, of any grade of descent in intellect or character, can climb to any public distinction, no matter what, without first groveling upon the earth, and bending the knee before this monster of depravity; when any private excellence is safe from its attacks; when any social confidence is left unbroken by it, or any tie of social decency and honor is held in the least regard; when any man has freedom of opinion, and presumes to think for himself, and speak for himself, without humble reference to a censorship which, for its rampant ignorance and base dishonesty, he

UTTERLY LOATHES AND DESPISES
in his heart; when those who most acutely feel its infamy and the reproach it casts upon the nation, and whom it denounces it to each other, dare to set their heels upon and crush it openly in the sight of all men, then I will believe that its influence is lessening and men are returning to their manly senses. But while that press has its evil eye in every house, and its black hand in every appointment in the state from the President to a postmaster; while it has ribald slander for its only stock in trade, so long must its odium be upon the country's head, and so long must the evil it works be plainly visible in the republic."

Yours respectfully,
A. HAZELTON.

"Don't you dawdle, Fred?"
"No, dear boy, I am invited out for my facial expression."
At a restaurant:
"Waiter, this salmon isn't fresh."
"How can that be, sir? It's just off the ice, sir."
"Then its your ice that isn't fresh, waiter."

FAULTLESS FAMILY MEDICINE

"I have used Simmons' Liver Regulator for many years, having made it my only Family Medicine. My mother before me was very partial to it. It is a safe, good and reliable medicine for any disorder of the system and it used in time is a great preventive of sickness. I often recommend it to my friends, and shall continue to do so."

"Rev. James H. Rollins,
"Pastor M. E. Church, No. Fairfield, Va."

TIME AND DOCTORS' BILLS
SAVED by always keeping Simmons' Liver Regulator in the house

"I have found Simmons' Liver Regulator the best family medicine I ever used for anything that may happen, have used it in Indigestion, Colic, Diarrhea, Biliousness, and found it to relieve immediately. After eating a hearty supper, if on going to bed I take about a teaspoonful, I never feel the effects of the supper catch."

THROUGH the medium of one of your books received through Mr. Frank T. Wray, Druggist, Apollo, Pa., I became acquainted with your CUTICURA REMEDIES, and take this opportunity to testify to you that their use has permanently cured me of one of the worst cases of blood poisoning, in connection with erysipelas, that I have ever seen, and this after having been pronounced incurable by some of the best physicians in our country.
