

Using Big Words.

In Nashville, many years ago, there resided a gentleman of great hospitality, large fortune and, though uneducated, possessed of hard-knot sense. Colonel W. had been elected to the Legislature and had also been Judge of the County Court. His honors had made him somewhat pompous, and he became very loud in using big words. On his farm he had a large mischievous ox called "Big Brindle," which frequently broke down his neighbor's fences, and committed other depredations, much to the Colonel's annoyance. One morning after breakfast, in presence of gentlemen who had stayed with him over night, and who were now on their way to town, he called his overseer and said to him:

"Mr. Allen, I desire you to impound 'Big Brindle' in order that I may hear no more animal versions of his eternal depredations." Allen bowed and walked off, sorely puzzled to know what the Colonel meant. So after Colonel W. left for town, he went to his wife and asked her what Colonel W. meant by telling him to 'impound' the ox?

"Why, he means to tell you to put him in a pen."

Allen, after a great deal of trouble, succeeded in shutting up the ox. "Well," said he, wiping the perspiration from his brow and soliloquizing, "this is impounding, is it? Now, I'm dead sure the old Colonel will ask me if I impounded Big Brindle, and I'll bet I'll puzzle him as bad as he did me."

The next day, the Colonel gave a dinner party, and, as he was not aristocratic, Allen, the overseer, sat down with the company. After the second or third glass was discussed, the Colonel turned to the overseer and said:

"Mr. Allen, did you impound Big Brindle?" "Yes, I did," answered Allen, "but old Brindle transcended the impound of the impound and scatterloppedlicated all over the equanimity of the forest."

The company burst into an immoderate fit of laughter, while the Colonel's face reddened with discomfiture.

"What do you mean by that, sir?" said he.

"Why, I mean, Colonel," said Allen, that old Brindle, being prognosticated with an idea of the cholery, ripped and tared, snorted and pawed dirt, jumped the fence and tuck to the woods, and would not be impounded no how."

This was too much; the company roared again, in which the Colonel was forced to join, and in the midst of the laughter, Allen left the table, saying to himself as he went:

"I reckon the Colonel won't ask me to impound any more cattle."

Office-Seekers of the Olden Time.

Office-seekers existed two centuries ago as now. In Mrs. Green's Calendar of State Papers, among the domestic scenes of the reign of Charles II., are these curious applications:

Jane Penning, widow. To be set down for Mistress Laundress to the Queen, on mediation of the Queen-Mother and of the Duchess of Orleans; his Majesty's sister, whom she has served nine years, chiefly without wages; lost two husbands in her Majesty's service, and has a heavy burden of debts and five distressed children.

Dame Martha Jackson, widow. For the place of Gentlewoman of the Horse and Lady of the Crup or to the Queen; also to be Countess of Pal Mail, Viscountess of Piccadilly, and Baroness of the Mews. Has suffered much for the service of horse and foot officers, and was once shot in the thigh.

Robert de Foze for the place of Page of the back stairs or Groom of the Privy Chamber to the Queen, one of the choicest rarities of her sex in this our age. His Majesty, on sight of part of his collection or rarities, promised him the place of gentleman usher, but he lost it by his absence, when sent into divers parts of Germany to fetch the remainder of his rarities, collected in many foreign Courts during his exile.

Elizabeth Carey, widow, prays that the pension granted her for service to the late King may be transferred, she being old and decrepit, to her son Peter, who followed his Majesty to Oxford, and was there bitten by his dog Cupid.

Captain Thomas Gardiner. For relief; faithfully served during the late rebellion; was taken prisoner at Newark and kept 12 months; in 1657, intending an attempt on Cromwell, but was taken in the gallery at Hampton Court, with two loaded pistols and a dagger, kept 12 months a prisoner, and only failed to be sentenced to death by want of evidence on the trial.

William, Earl of Airth and Monteith. For a warrant for making a Baronet, so that he may be enabled to subsist, until some satisfaction can be granted from the great sums due to him from the king, for want of which he is reduced to strange extremities.

—Lawyer W., while entering his cold bed in a cold winter night, exclaimed: "Of all the ways of getting a living, the worst a man could follow, would be going about town in such nights as this and getting into bed for folks."
