DEFENSIVE PRIVILEGES UNDER THE LAW.

THE prosecutions against Latter-day Saints for unlawful co-habitation are watched with close attention, especially by the community immediately affected. Each case has its own peculiar phase, differing in some respects from the others. The distinctions involved in the various attitudes assumed by the persons accused probably attract as much notice as any other attract as much notice as any other feature. The conductors of and sympathizers with the anti-"Mormon" crusade are, tudging from their averagions in ro. judging from their expressions in re-lation to the theme, exceedingly anxious that the Saints should pose as through the head and Moore through many Mexicans from the neighboring the heart, and both died in five minmartyrs. Such a theory is the veriest nonsense from any standpoint. In the first place for a man to seek distinction afforded by martrydom, in throwing himself voluntarily into the hands of those who are seeking to imprison him, would be one of the strongest an enormous price.
