Judge Hall held that the proper remedy for plaintiff is to bring "At least one wife," Mr. Smith interan action to foreclose her vendor's lien rupted.

"Well, we don't construe it that way in our church," said Senator Hoar, amid laughter. "What I wanted to get at is this: Now I know several bishops in our church who are bachelors. Do you regard it a divine command that the bishops shall have one wife or more? What I want to know is how you construe that command."

"I believe the practise of polygamy as general among the Jews at the was time the Scriptures were written," said Mr. Smith. "I believe that it was commanded that a Bishop should be a mar-ried man because his duties made it necessary that he should be an experienced man.'

(Here the chairman had to rap loudly to restore order in the committee room.) Senator McComas took the witness in hand to bring out whether, as the head of the "Mormon" Church, Mr. Smith had ever rabuked the Apostles of the Church for teaching polygamy since the manifesto of 1890, and Mr. Smith declared: "No member of the Church has ever taught polygamy since that suggestions, but everyone of them falls, short of the original. The story is not only absurd, but dreary, and hard as the people worked, there was no over-coming this drawback. The big hit of the night was the "champagne dance," which was both novel and startling. Mr. Collins as the showman is a co-median who might do wonders if the author had only given him the opportunity. As it was, one had to sit through a wilderness of trash to finally reach a very few good laughs. Miss Tyrrell in the part of Wrenne was cute and fetching in her way, but is a much better actress than a singer. Her one very pretty number, in which the calcium light and the male chorus were thrown on to make up for the vocal thrown on to make up for the vocal shortcomings, was heartily encored. But what is the connection, Miss Wrenne, between a pretty love song, and a hoslery exhibit? The others in the cast ranked from fair to middling. Mr. Ben Loose as the old astronomer was good in spots, but Mr. Brine of the army was only fair, while Mr. Kappeler of the navy was altogether too faint in both voice and action for the ideal hero. The new Philharmonic Guaranteeing association introduced as its first attraction last night the noted singer, Mme. Lillian Blauvelt. It is pleasant to be able to record that in spite of a big counter attraction at the theater the Congregational church was fairly well illied, and the receipts, while they left no margin of profit, will nearly offset the expenses, so that the first, venture of the new association may be regarded as fairly satisfactory from the financial standpoint. From the artistic one, the success is undoubted. Had event occurred at the Theater, which is the real place for a singer of Mme. Blauvelt's attainments, it would undoubtedly have scored a hand-some profit, with the social backing the association gave it.

Mme. Blauvelt's program was large-ly the same as that which she rendered not long since at her notable concert in Ogden. It was made up of Italian, German, French and English numbers, and ranged from selections calling for such brilliant vocalization as Rossini's "Una Voce Poco Fa" 'down to such exquisite bits as "Roses After Rain" and "My Bairnie." While she did some beautiful work, and caused a furore for the Italian number, to those who know of what she is capable, it was evident that Mme. Blauvelt was not at her best last evening. She had had a long trip and was laboring from throat weariness, and this imparted at times a certain hardness and lack of sympathy to some of her tones. Con-sidering this, it is remarkable that she created the enthusiasm last night that she did. Her voice seems to be rather a mezzo than a high soprano, her richest tones being in the middle and middie lower registers. One of her dis-tinct charms is her articulation, and it was a relief indeed to hear a singer capable of singing, and making the audience understand the story at the same time. In addition, she presents a charming personal appearance that wins an audience from the start. She had any number of recalls during the program, and after the concluding number the audience remained to call her back, and insisted on another.

For Three Weeks "Jawbone" Road Snowed Up-20 Passengers Missing.

Lewiston, Mont., March 4 .- Somewhere between here and Lombard, no. body knows just where, three trains, one a freight and two mixed passenger and freight, have been buried in snowdrifts for two weeks. For three weeks the railroad to Lewistown, the famous "Jawbone" road of central Montana, running 115 miles through Fergus county has been completely blocked. Snow-plows with big gangs of men have been bucking the drifts night and day, but snow falls almost daily. The missing trains have not been reached and it is probable they will not be until a thaw sets in. The two mixed trains carried about 20 passengers. The crew of the freight train managed to reach Har lowtown and procured provisions, and it is believed the snow-bound passen. gers on the other trains have succeed-ed in reaching some of the ranches where they are being taken care of.

"How about Apostle Grant?"

Mr. Smith asserted that the incident over which the anti-"Mormon" papers have made "such a hubbub" had been a declaration merely that Apostle Grant had two wives. That declaration, the witness said, had been made by Mr. Grant in a private speech and he had not taught the practise of the system. "What would you do it the statistical What would you do if the principle of plural marriages was publicly at-tacked?" Senator McComas asked.

"We would defend it," said Mr. Smith. When this point was reached and as none of the senators desired to ask any more questions of the witness, Mr Tayler was instructed to put in the various documents and books which he desired to offer as exhibits. He said it would take him half an hour to read them and the committee adjourned untll afternoon. When the afternoon session of the committee opened, Mr. Tayler read from the book "Doctrine and Covenants" the first revelations of "Joseph, the Seer," at Kirtland, Ohio, declaring that he had been chosen to receive revelations and that none other should be chosen "until he is taken" and then to be chosen through him only. Many other extracts from subsequent revelations were read, including that relating on polygamous marriages and the authority "seal for eternity" or to perform celes-tial marriages. These passages were incorporated into the record as a part of the testimony.

resigned. Hoar took the leading part but in which Mr. Worthington scarcely had any voice at all.

Mr. Smith was asked to state to the committee whether the "Mormon" peo. ple would obey the law of the land or a new revelation which might come antagonistic to that law. He believed that the law of the land would be obeyed, and to substantiate the belief read from books to show that all members of the Church are charged to obey the laws of the land, by divine injunction. As for himself personally he said, "I should strive with all my might to obey the laws of the land but I should not like to be put in a position where I should be compelled to abandon my children."

LAST DAY OF AUCTION SALE.

Saturday evening winds up W. W. Hall's auctionsale. Twenty elegant presents given away at that time.

A wealth of color, a big and handsome chorus, a fine orchestra, one sensational dance, two or three clever people, half dozen of mediocre talent, and a deady libretto-such is the combination that forms "The Silver Silpper." The entire production is one of lavishness and magnificence, and the salary list must be a terror to contemplate, but throughout the whole entertainment, one cannot avoid the feeling that the authors were striving frantically to equal their were striving francically to equal their own record in "Florodora," and that they failed in their endeavor. It is your famous '73 Johannisberger, is it work of Booker T. Washington at Tuskigee, Ala., and a musicale given by members of the Calvary church. But he, though discom-fited was not convinced. "If I could see that shopkeeper,' he murmured--there may be some error-I could never make such a mistake." "And accordingly the shopkeeper was sent for, and our host, before all of us, asked him where he had gotten that wine. "The man paied and trembled. "I admit my guilt,' he said.
