THE "DEMAND" UPON THE "MORMON" CHURCH.

The Boston Traveller of July 19, 1887, contains an editorial on "Utah and Statehood" which admits the ordinary qualifications of the Territory, its population, resources, etc., as justifying its admission to the Union; but it also states that the constitution prohibits of bigamy and polygamy are made as strong as possible; but it fears that this action is engineered from the outside, with one political object in view, and that it is a Democratic plot.

The Traveller, like other papers that touch on this subject, indulges in a great deal of conjecture, and makes up in doubts and queries what it fails to supply in argument. The present question is one of fact and policy, and surmise and conjecture may be wholly unnecessary; also the fact that the constitution prohibits of bigamy and polygamy are made as strong as possible; but it fears that this action is engineered from the outside, with one political object in view, and that it is a Democratic plot.

THE NEW ORLEANS STATE OF JULY 2nd

As appeared from a dispatch in the States last evening, the Utah Convention met Thursday and yesterday at Salt Lake City, and made a part of the constitution of the Territory, and then as soon as the wires bring news of its adoption the same papers condemn it, give the matter some consideration and see that in taking the steps indicated by the prohibitory provisions the voting people of Utah have done all that lies in their power to do this question.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP.

Tax President's tour through the interior of New York State can be called little else than a triumphal procession. At every stopping place even the smallest villages, great crowds gather to obtain a sight of the President. This latter desire is gratified wherever time and circumstances will permit, some 4,000 persons having given the President a friendly grip at one stopping place, and at another, the President's hand must be in a condition by this time that causes the one who uses it so effectively to be thankful that the time for preparing his message for Congress is still full of days.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP.

Not in recent times has any such spontaneity and commingling characterized the gathering and attendance of the populace wherever the President appeared, and it only illustrates what has often been claimed—that Mr. Cleveland is the most popular and best "all round" executive that has yet held office for a long time, perhaps all time.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP.

The Richmond, Va., Week of July 7th, after explaining the whole movement and the objections of the Utah "Gentiles," closes a long editorial with these words: "The movement now in progress in Salt Lake City is in the direction of reform, whether as intended or not. Let the Latter Day Saints frame their own constitution, and let the Gentiles be satisfied with the task of managing revenue and taxation, but when it grasps at the power of the State, it is more at home, and almost any change it may inaugurate in this matter will be a change for the better."

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP.

We clip the following from the Omaha World of the 8th inst.: "The constitutional convention in Utah is a movement in progress in Salt Lake City, and it is in the direction of reform, whether as intended or not. Let the Latter Day Saints frame their own constitution, and let the Gentiles be satisfied with the task of managing revenue and taxation, but when it grasps at the power of the State, it is more at home, and almost any change it may inaugurate in this matter will be a change for the better."

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP.

Congress, in deciding whether the application of Utah shall be accepted or rejected, cannot rightly take into consideration the belief or disbelief of any portion of the citizens of this Territory. It has been proclaimed to the country that in the extreme and special legislation adopted by the Government against certain classes in Utah, religion, belief, doctrine, were not in view and that actions only were
