CHURCH AND STATE IN FRANCE

Archbishop Ireland Says That Separation Means Servitude And Oppression.

CLERGY ACT FROM PRINCIPLE.

French Catholics Have Been Unfortunate in Many of Their Leaders And Spokesmen.

St. Paul, Dec. 23.-Archbishop Ireland in his sermon at the cathedral this morning spoke on the topic, "Church and State in France." He said in part:

"Let no American be misled by words which have a totally different significance in their land from what is allowed to them in France. Separation of the church from the state in America means liberty and justice; there is means servitude and oppres-

Speaking on Friday last to the cardinals present in the vatican Pius X said of the French situation: 'We are ready to submit to separation from the state, but it must be a fair separatine state, as obtains in the United states, in Brazil, in Great Britain, in Holland—and not a subjection.' No Holland—and not a subjection. No catholic in the United States makes objection to separation, for there separation means exactly what it purports to mean.

"Under advice from the head of the church the bishops of France refused the associations offered by the law of separation. They acted from principle. separation. They acted from principle. In the interest of religion they could not approve such associations; they cannot by tolerating them appear to approve them. They are not rebels against the laws of the country. The associations, as the minister of education, M. Briand himself, has declared, were real statutes bladlar upon citi. were not statutes binding upon citi-zens; they were privileges tendered to the church which it was free to ac-cept or reject. She has rejected them. Pope and bishops knew full well the pope and bishops knew full well the consequences that were to follow; the spirit of the government was not hidden from their eyes; it was an era of persecution; but, if no other escape from persecution were possible than the acceptance of the law of associations, they were ready to welcome persecutions.

is a lamentable fact that there is in France a party bent on the de-struction of religion. The war is made on the Catholic church because made on the Catholic church because she in France represents religion. In reality, in intent and in fact, the war is against Christianity under any form, against religion of any kind, against the idea itself of a God reigning over men. The old spirit of Voltaire and the encyclopedists of the eighteenth century never died out in France. It had an outburst of triumph in the revolution, when God was declared non-existent and infamy itself, denoted the goddess of reason, was planted for adoration upon the pillar of the cathedral of Paris. It slumbered awhile edral of Paris. It slumbered awhile under succeeding imperial and royal regimes; it has re-awakened to new vigor in the freedom allowed to thought and speech by the present re-

"This party of infidels and atheists far from being France, as I shall ter show; but it is active, persistent, ascrupulous, and it forces itself with enscrupulous, and it forces itself with vengeance to the front. It has grasped the helm of power, and it steers the ship of state into the darkest depths of unbelief and irreligion. Yesterday it was Combes, the most brutal of all day it is Clemenceau, somewhat more subdued in his hatred, but yet a leader today it is Clemenceau, somewhat more subdued in his hatred, but yet a leader in the fight.

"With such men, and with others dividing with them particular power, even less violent adepts of irreligion, there reigns another idea—the omnipotence of the state. This was ever the plague of France, even when her rulers were devout Catholics. The state must control all agencies of power: it must brook no rival. Even the church must be in the hands of the government. So it was with Louis XIV and with Napoleon; and so is it with the republic. The republic is a name in France: it has been well said of it that it sleeps on the bed of Louis XIV. France has never understood the meaning of a republic, which is respect for private and personal liberty, which is to leave as much as possible to the people, to take to the state only what is needed for the public welfare. The most republican of republicans, seated in parliament, set out at once to regulate all things to their own liking. We are the state, they cry out, as Louis XIV once said. I am the state. And the state is the great power and all must think and act as the state wills and as we will. This is certainly the spirit of the infidels who now rule the country; and I am not at all sure it would not, fo some degree at least, be the spirit of good Catholics, who, were they to be to-morrow in the ascendancy, would believe it their duty to make everyone go to mass, as the present governleve it their duty to make everyone to to mass, as the present government assumes in their duty to let no "I know her cities and her villages; know her people—her aristocracy, er bourgeoise and her peasantry—ad I know them to be Catholic. How, en, explain the pultical situation? here are several set to political for East-age." to to mass. he masses are were governed, and the art of ty in power, it f thousands of For ages do not cor governing. But names the hundr ect of a depart. officials, from the ment to the humble ment to the humble school teacher, to the village constable; they obey the order received from Poris, they sneak to the crowds around them—crowds who read little; who wink little, and the crowds in their durn obey the mandate. An independer, self-argued suffrage has not entered into the popular life. Nor is there among the masses the ambition to gain political victory. Paris for a century and a half has ruled France. Establish a new regime, monarchial or republic. In Paris this evening, the provinces awaken tomorrow monarchical or republican. It will require long years to decentralize power in France, to give to each citizen consciousness of personal independence, to obtain through universal suffrage a true exthrough universal suffrage a true ex-pression of national will.

There is no other country where well-organized and stirring fraction the population can sway so easily masses and impose upon them its will.

"The clergy, who are now the chief sufferers, are much to blame. They, too, have retained, even at the altar and in the pulpit, the spirit of passive obedience inherited from old regimes. Admirable in teaching the catechism, in administering the sacraments, they have never learned the virtues of public life; they have never quickened beneath the activity of the battlefield. Their example and their preaching have left their disciples in the same possivity, and these know nothing of the public defense of principles; saints before the altar, they are cowards before the electoral urn.

"Then French Catholics have been unfortunate in many of their leaders and spokesmen. These remain partisans of buried political regimes. If the masses of the people have learned any one thing, it is this, that France is a republic; that they are republicans. But the monarchists are numerous, chiefly the old nobility, the most generous patrons of religion, and too many of the clergy, who still read their politics in Bossuet and Massillon, who judge the republican form of government by the Jacobin republic of contemporary France. Here is the weakness of the Catholics of France—the infidel, the socialist, who solicits votes, cries out: "The republic is in peril; no republican must cast his vote for a monarchist, even if that monarchist be otherwise the best and purest of men; and the masses vote for the infidel or the socialist in order that the republic may survive, trusting to the republic may survive, trusting to the republic to do in the long run what is most serviceable for France and even for religious principles themselves. What happens? The moderate republican candidate is defeated; the infidel or socialist is elected. This is what is witnessed in numerous instances on every election day. No one understood France better than Lee XIII. He bade all Catholics seek the welfare of country and of church within the ranks of loyal adherents to the republic. Had Leo been listened to. France in all probability would have escaped the religious persecution of the present day. Monarchical ideas and plottings have done dreadful injury to the church in France."

FOREIGN IMMIGRANTS.

Expected a Million and a Quarter More

Than Came This Year Will Come. New Yok, Dec. 24.—Figures just compiled at Ellis island indicate that at the present rate of increase, 1.283,-415 more aliens may be expected to enter this country through the immigration station on Ellis island next year,

"The number of aliens who will land at New York this year," said Immigration Commissioner Watchorn yesterday, "will approximate 1,050,000 persons, as against a total of 859,010 who landed here in 1905. This shows an increase in the immigration of about 29.23 per cent. Using these of about 22.23 per cent. Using these figures as the basis for an estimate in 1907, we may expect 1,283,415 aliens to arrive at Ellis island."

SAILORS NO SMUGGLERS,

New York. Dec. 24.—The Brooklyn water front was agitated last night by a story that the United States battleship Ohlo, which arrived in the navy-yard on Dec. 2 from the orient, had been boarded by customs officers on special instructions from Washington, who had seized many thousands of dollars worth of dutlable goods which officers and men were attempting to smuggle.

ble goods which officers and men were attempting to smuggle.

Lieut. Commander MacDonald, executive officer of the Ohio said an inspection had been made and the sailors and officers brought out a few bottles of wine and trinkets for the officer to appraise, but no good were confiscated and no officers nor sailors' trunks were broken open for smuggled luxuries. Commander MacDonald credited the story to disgruntled sailors.
