It will be raised to at least $150,000."

New York, 12.—Edward Banks, colored hotel waiter, has sued T. C. Vokenberg for $250 blood money. Defendant, in February, was found unconscious in bed, from gas poisoning. Physicians decided that transfusion of blood was necessary to save his life. Eight ounces was transfused from Banks for the purpose. The latter claims that he was promised ten cents a drop. Defendant insists that he paid Banks $5 in full for all of time.

LONDON, 12.—The Speaker of the House of Commons has written to Bradlaugh informing him that he will be excluded from the House until he engages not to attempt to take the oath in disregard of the resolution of the House. A number of unsuccessful attempts have been made to raise the steamer Daphne. Eighty bodies have thus far been recovered. The inquiry instituted by the government to ascertain the cause of the accident has begun under the direction of Sir Edward Reed. The builders of the Daphne testified that she was launched in the usual manner and no fear had been entertained of any danger. They said the deck on the starboard side had been removed to admit boiler plates. Planking and other materials were stored on other parts of the deck. She sank on her port side.

LONDON, 11.—The pauper emigrants who were returned to Ireland by the American authorities on the steamers Furness and Spain, were landed at Queenstown yesterday. Advices from Persia state that serious fears are felt in regard to the health of the Shah.

Gladstone in reply to Sir Stafford Northcote, said when the French occupied Tamatave, Madagascar, and proclaimed a state of siege, the British consul was suffering from a serious illness, which political issues aggravated. His secretary was arrested in the presence of Admiral Pierre. The French commander ordered the sick man to leave Tamatave within 24 hours. The consul died seven hours after receiving the notice. Admiral Pierre also stopped communications between the British man-of-war Dryad, which was stationed there, and the shore, and her captain was only allowed to make a verbal protest against this proceeding. The flags of all foreign consuls were hauled down. Gladstone also stated that an English missionary named Shaw had been arrested at Tamatave and remains in prison. The charge against him was not known. Inquiries have been made regarding its nature, but the only answer given was, the law must take its course. Gladstone in conclusion said: "In announcing these grave and painful occurrences, I can only say that we must await the receipt of further details. We must also wait these communications from the French government which the case may require, which we have intimated that we expect and which it would be our duty to make under similar circumstances." (Cheers.)

French provincial newspapers publish a note believed to be written by Prince Jerome Napoleon, strongly deprecating any alliance of Bonapartists with Royalists.

Gladstone's statement about the French in Madagascar produced a painful impression in the House. While the proceedings of the French are calculated to strain the present relations of England and France, it is not generally believed that a serious rupture will ensue. No reply to the demand upon the French government for explanations made by the French foreign secretary had been received up to the hour of adjournment of the House. It is generally expected when all the facts are known the French government will express regret for the occurrences complained of and mark her disapproval by the recall of Admiral Pierre.

Advices to June 6th from Gaboon, Africa, a French colony of that name on the west coast of Africa, state that the French commandant there arbitrarily searched English merchants, fined those having arms in their possession, and interfered with the schools of American missionaries, and refusing to permit the teaching of any language but French.

PARIS, 11.—There was an exciting scene in the Chamber of Deputies last evening, owing to Paul de Cassagnac declaring in the course of his remarks that the Tonquin expedition was due to stock-jobbing motives. Quiet was finally restored by the passage of a resolution excluding Cassagnac from the Chamber for a fortnight.

News is received here that China has appointed Maklen, a Europeanized diplomat, to negotiate with Tristram, the French Minister, relative to Tonquin affairs.

Count de Chambord passed a good day, but the small amount of sustenance he is able to take does not compensate his waste of strength.

THE FIRST.

The tints of myriad dewy flowers;
The seven gay hues the rainbow wears;
The flood that pours through April showers,
Which bathes the earth in shimmering
tears;
The glow that streams through red yule
fires;
The silver radiance of the moon,
That glitters on the tall church spires,
The ruddy beams of sultry noon,
The glimmer of the planets far
That downward steals in pearly rays;
And every distant twinkling star;
The sunny gold of summer days.

THE SECOND.

The palace of the monarch high;
The simple cottage draped in vines;
The villa glistening to the skies;
The log-hut framed of rough-hewn
planks;
The mansion of the merchant king,
Of red brick built or massive stone;
The clay-walled cabin by the spring,

The simple negro calls his own;
The wigwag of the Indian brave;
The snowy cells on Iceland's shore;
The home on lonely ocean wave
Around whose base the billows roar.

THE WHOLE.

Far over the seas where the winds blow
loud,
Like the sound of a bitter sobbing,
And pipe and shiver in each white shroud,
While the restless sea is throbbing,
And the waning moon has veiled her light,
And the stars are gone from heaven,
The sailor yearns for a beacon bright
To cheer the darkness given,
And away he looks as he guides the helm
Of his vessel ceaseless rocking,
While the waves each other overwhelm,
And the gale sounds weird and mocking.
And far in the distance he sees a light!
A star on the breast of the billow!
He smiles in the face of the lowering night,
And restful goes to his pillow.
