UTAH AND REPUBLICANISM. Our esteemed opponent the Chicago plain the truth. Times has another long editorial in response to the replies of the DESERET NEWS to erroneous statemen's of that paper. The Times says we offer some "conundrums" in "behalf of the corporation commonly called the Mormon Church." The opening assertion of our Chicago contemporary is wrong in two particulars. First it is mistaken in calling the "Mormon Church" "a corporation;" second in saying that our queries were offered on behalf of that religious organization. It is true that the Church sometimes speaks officially through these columns. But the arguments and questions and statements of the DESERET NEWS are not given as the utterances of the Church or of anybody but the writers. unless so announced. The "Mormon" Church is not likely to engage in controversy with the Chicago Tines.

The Times thinks it has impaled us on a pinhook, because we asserted that "Utah has not now a republican form of government" and at the same time admitted that "Utah is a part of the republic." And it argues in this way: "If there is a republic it is under a republican torm of government." The trouble with, the Chicago Times in discussing propositions with this paper is, that it invariably changes in some respect the form of the subject under discussion. The question was not what is Utsh under, but what it has. We admitted that we were under the authority of the United States, also that this Government is a republic. But we denied that Utah, as a political organization, has a republican form of government, and it is to obtain that form that the citizens here desire the rights and privileges of statchood.

We showed that in many respects the form of government existing here is anti-republican. But the Times says that in our idea, "a republican form of government is a form or mode of appointing the executive functionaries." Perhaps we ought to be very grateful to the Times for its apparent generosity in fashtoning for us an idea that we neither expressed .nor entertained. But really we look upon this fresh attempt to build an argument on false premises as neither generous nor bonest.

The Times says, in a style as though it was giving us a valuable piece of political information: "A republic is and attempted to make a speech. The on the earth. simply that form of a political consti-Court ruled out any speaking until the authority resides in the people." Just so. That is our "idea" exactly, and one that we have ofter expressed in similar language. Now let us see if Utah has a republican form of government. The people who are governed in this Territory have no voice affairs of the General in the Government, and very little in those of the local government. In a State the citizens have votes in the election of officers to represent them in all the departments of the General and local Governments. In a Territory they de not. They are under the supreme dominion of a power in the establishment of which they take no part. They have no person to represent them who has a vote in Congress. They do not cast a vote for any officer of the National Government. They are in just the same position in regard to the executive and judicial officers of the territorial government. This is not "supreme political power in the people," therefore, on the Times' own showing, it is not a republican form of government. The Times says of Utah: "Its local regulative rewer resides in a popular representative body as completely and supremely as in the State of Illinois; that is, in subordination to the supreme national authority." There again the Times is wrong as to the fact, and is therefore wrong as to the conclusion deduced from it. The acts of the people's elected legislators are subject to the absolute veto of a Governor in whose appointment they have to volce, directly or indirectly. He need not give may reason for his veto. He need not veto a bill stall, He can simply refuse or neglect to sign it and it is void. No two-thirds or even unanimous vote can override this absolutism. If that is a republican form of government, it is a new kind of republicanism. There is nothsays: ing more monarchial or autocratic in the world. But the Times contrads that "the people" means the whole people of the United States. Just so, when we speak of the nation as a republic. But that is not the question. There is no cispute about that. The point is, what kind of roverament has the Territory of Utab? It is that which we denounce as unrepublican in form and spirit, in practice and effect. In reply to the request that the Times will quote from the Constitution of the United States that clause or section which be regulated by conscience and not by clothes the Congress with the extraorcinary and absolute powers over the people of Utah which that paper cisims for it, the Times says it "cannot spare space for the whole Constitu i m." Is not this a trifle disingecu. ons? Is it not an avoidance of the quetsion? If the Constitution is full of references to such powers, surely the Times might have "spared space" for one, seeing that it has devoted a great deal of valuable space to unnecessary arguments much in the nature of blowing against the wind. Finally the Tones denies that the original States, in forming the Union, entered into a compact. Well the Times may deny the fact, all it pleases; that will not alter its existence. We say they did, history proves they did, the Times says they did not. Very well, it does not matter, the Constitution is abiding evidence that what we to compile som

We advise the editors to read up a little on the Utah situation before opposing the effort her voting citizens are making to secure a republican form of government, and not to be too captions
