Our Country Contemporaries.

Beaver Enterprise, Dec. 19—

On Tuesday morning the citizens on the east side of the Court House Block were again startled from their slumbers by the fiendish howling, yelling and profanity of United States troops, who by some means or other are permitted to stay in town and drink themselves crazy, staggering to their quarters beastly drunk at all hours between midnight and daylight.

Among the many blasphemous threats and whisky "bravado" belchings, were: "We're going to run this old Mormon town," followed with the usual profane phrases acquired by training in brothel bells. It savored much of the cowardly mob spirit exhibited in the beer of the Poland ball, when whisky, powder and blasphemy rang the chimes of riot and mobocracy.

How long are our wives and children to be scared from their beds by this accursed yelling of beastly drunken soldiers, and how long will apostates continue to whisper their infamous lies into the ears of the U. S. troops, so that when whisky has grazed their brains they may provide trouble between good citizens who are tired of these midnight disturbances?

The same drunken, bawling and yelling was repeated last evening as described in the local above. Reports say two shots were fired and exclamations of pain or injury followed. Drunken soldiers fell down in the streets east of the Court House and could only be lifted on their feet by other less-inebriated comrades.

BREVITIES.

A man in Cincinnati, advertising for a situation, says, "Work is not so much an object as good wages."

A railroad ticket agent at Savannah has been presented with a watch for his civil answers to the public.

In meditating on a critical occasion a man says to himself: "We are 'told that the smallest hair throws a shadow.' And so it does. It throws a shadow over your appetite, when you find it in Vienna—Mortimer's Weekly."

Parties, says the cycle of the Vie Parisienne, are like women; they appreciate our fidelity to them, but they rejoice in our infidelity to another in their favor.

"I can afford to be a little extravagant now, as my husband's been elected to the Legislature," said an Indiana woman, as she ordered six pairs of soap sent up—Detroit Free Press.

An English minister says that "If Scripture said one thing and the London Times another, five hundred Englishmen out of every five hundred and ten would believe the Times."

Never attempt to do anything that is not right. Just as sure as you do you will get into trouble. If you even suspect that anything is wrong, do it not until you are sure your suspicions are groundless.

It is true that there is nothing like advertising, but a public office with nothing but his salary of $2,000 a year to live on, should be careful not to give his wife more than $5,000 worth of diamonds at a time.

A wagon said to be eighty-eight years old is still doing daily duty in Connecticut. It is probably companion to the

"That ran a hundred years, to a day."

The Great Valley Union says: "Children in the States of the primary schools are required to answer written questions that would have puzzled Sir Isaac Newton."

A wooden-nutting peddler of the Morning Journal and Courier, of New Haven, says the reason Washington boasts that it never had a large fire is that it too rotten to burn.—Washington Chronicle.

Four brothers in Holland are aged respectively 63, 55, 48 and 31. The first two were in the grand army in Russia. The third was enrolled as a soldier, but did not leave France, and the fourth was in the Dutch army. They are all in vigorous health.

There is a city in Mexico with 10,000 inhabitants, where, as far as there are four public schools, only have a dozen drinking places and no lawyers. During a period of twenty-six months there has not been a murder committed in the city.

In despair a French capitalist has invested all his money in cosmetics. He says: "National obligations depend on politics and politics depend on money."

Augustine Cochran one day interviewed a Paris ragpicker. He said, "What induces you to take up this occupation?" "I was a soldier," was the answer. "How poor?" "I was a carver; but I had a great taste for rag-picking."

But I chose new companions among the ragpickers, who do not laugh at me, and I am happy in my lot."

The readers of agricultural papers have probably met with a good many items of late on the subject of "controlling the sexes." It will be well, perhaps, to explain here that this question is confined to the breeding of farm stock. No difficulty is experienced in regulating the proportion of the sexes in the human family; for while there is an excess of males, all we have to do is to get up a war which can be done at any time, and in a year's time or less the male sex will be reduced to a normal number. And when there are too many women, which is often the case, they very constantly take it upon themselves and other effective means known only to themselves and third-class lecturers, they regulate the matter very nicely.—Ex.
