

AUTOMOBILING IN EUROPE.

General R. E. Mansfield, writing from Europe, says that it is estimated that there are now in Europe 8,000 American automobiles, consisting mostly of touring cars. The American market for American automobiles in Europe is very large, and the establishment of much needed central European agencies where repairs and supplies for American machines can be promptly procured.—Consular Report.

REMEMBER THESE THINGS.

Egg spoons that are stained should be rubbed with damp salt before polishing.

Saucepans should be as flat and broad as possible, so that no heat may be wasted.

If a few drops of glycerine be added to the starch for linens, it will be found that the iron will not stick, and that the linens will have a beautiful gloss after they are ironed.

Paraffine split on a stone floor may be removed by rubbing bath brick over the mark and letting it stay till next day, then wash in the usual way, and the floor will be perfectly clean.

Paint can be removed from glass by rubbing it with hot strong vinegar. Stains on the hands can be removed by acetic acid, salts of lemon, and ink marks will soon yield to pumice stone.

To remove ink stains from linen dip the article in milk and let it soak for about two hours, then take out and wash with soap while the milk still remains on the spots of ink. This will remove any long standing stain.

The great interest in motoring in all parts of the world, and especially in Great Britain, as a means of travel, is well known to Americans.

ST. GAUDENS'S INDIAN MAID AND EAGLE AND THE REAL THINGS CONTRAST.

Herewith are shown the much discussed designs by St. Gaudens for the new United States coins, from which the motto "In God We Trust" is to be eliminated.

President Roosevelt says, "That to put such a motto on coins, or to use it in any kindred manner, not only does no good but does positive harm, as it is in fact irreverence which comes dangerously near to sacrilege."

The president, however, is not the only head of a government who in recent years has caused the removal of the motto from the coins of his country.

The person who is ruling France in the earlier part of this year, decreed that the exhortation "Dieu protège la France" ("God protect France") shall not appear on the coins of the French republic to be minted henceforth, as it does on the present coins.

We Trust" and his opinion that the placing of the same on coin tends to encourage Heresy.

In this connection it may be of interest to know that for centuries the mottoes expressed in Biblical phrases or moral-sentenced lessons of charity and kindness have been stamped on their coins. Those coins have been out of circulation for a long time, but the mottoes—evidently believed that the instruments of charity should be regarded as preaching a sermon in contrast.

The St. Gaudens' "Indian" head was sketched from an Irish model, Mary Cunningham, a waitress. It is contrasted with two beautiful Sioux girls, the real thing in the Indian line. Alongside the St. Gaudens design is what purports to be an American eagle. The real bird is pictured in contrast.

The motto, "Ei pluribus unum," never authorized by law to be placed on the coin of the United States, first appeared on an American coin in 1789. In 1787 a New York goldsmith coined a piece of money which was known as "the sixteen dollar gold piece," and upon it the motto was stamped in this form, "Eius E Pluribus." Only four of these coins are known to be in existence. They were valued at more than $2,000 each.

The words "In God We Trust" were first placed on the twenty cent piece when it came into the subsidiary currency in 1864. The motto was placed there by direction of James Pollock, then director of the United States mint at Philadelphia.

And of how little use money will be when the curtain falls on life—it brought home to the minds of mankind by the warning that appears on coins of Innocent XI. "They will not profit thee in the day of judgment."

CURED OF BRIGITTE'S DISEASE.

Mr. Robert O. Burke, Elmer, N. Y., writes: "Before I started to use Foley's Kidney Cure I had to get up from twelve to twenty times a night, and my wife would hardly sleep at all. And though I was as healthy as I could possibly be and of my family across the room, I made given up my bed to my wife, and friend recommended Foley's Kidney Cure. I took a pint bottle washed wonders and before I had taken the third bottle the doctor said to me, 'You are an old man, and you have a cure for Brigitte's disease.' Can sale by F. J. H.
