A CURRENT QUESTION.

We have received from one of the wards in Idaho the following question, which we are requested to answer through the columns of the Deseret News. As it does not relate to any local matter which would come under the immediate jurisdiction of the ward or stake authorities, and is a subject that is receiving much attention just now, we will respond to the desire of our friend on this matter, as far as we are able. The question asked is as follows:

"Did Joseph Smith the Prophet, in translating the Book of Mormon, use his own language in translating the book into the English language, or did he use what appeared to him in the Urim and Thummim as the interpretation of the Nephite characters, and would it pass away before it was correctly written?"

We are of the opinion that the Manual for 1905-1906 prepared as a guide to the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association in the study of the Book of Mormon, will give a sufficient answer. But there is some conflict of opinion, in consequence of statements purporting to have been made by David Whitmer and Martin Harris, concerning the manner in which the Prophet Joseph obtained the interpretation of the characters inscribed upon the metallic plates, which were in "reformed Egyptian" hieroglyphics. The idea conveyed by those statements was that when the Prophet Joseph looked into the Urim and Thummim he saw the characters that were on the plates, and underneath them their meaning in the English language, and that when reading them to the scribe who wrote for him, the line would not disappear and another take its place unless it was copied correctly.

The history of the Prophet Joseph Smith, prepared from his diary, does not afford that information, nor do we know of anything authentic as coming from him which gives a description or explanation of the manner of translation of the Nephite record. One thing however, is very clear to us, and that is, that whether in prophecy or preaching or translating, the man inspired of God is not simply a talking machine, but one who is divinely impressed and enlightened and whose understanding is quickened and enlarged, but who still possesses all his faculties and the free agency which God has given to all mankind.

If all that was necessary for the Seer was to look into the instrument given to him as an aid in the work of translation, there would have been no real necessity for his possession of such care. And if every word in English was supplied to him in the way supposed, it is not likely that any errors either in grammar or composition would be seen. We have not the slightest doubt that with the aid of those stones and by the gift and power of God, Joseph was able to read the characters on the plates and understand their full signification, and that he expressed that in the ordinary language to which he was accustomed and according to his knowledge in the use of it, just as a person who translates anything from an ancient or modern language, the understanding of which he obtains by the ordinary means, and who would give it in English, according to the usual phraseology to which he was accustomed.

The prophets of old who spoke and wrote "as moved upon by the Holy Ghost," though inspired by the same spirit, expressed that which was given to them in their own way and with those distinctive peculiarities they each possessed. They were not acted upon against their own will or as automatons. As Paul has it, "The spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets." Any one who has enjoyed the spirit of revelation, either in prophecy, in testimony, in preaching, in interpretation of tongues, or in other spiritual gifts, knows what it is to receive light and truth by the power of God, which he speaks forth in his own language and in his own manner and style. He who has not been thus inspired, may not be able to understand how the meaning of the characters on the plates was made clear to the translator so that he could express it in his own language.

But the important fact in this important matter is, that Joseph Smith really received those ancient records, containing much of the history of this continent and an account of the dealings of God with the early inhabitants thereof; that he translated them into the English language; and that according to the testimony of the three witnesses, Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer and Martin Harris, the voice of the Lord declared that they were translated "by the gift and power of God," and therefore they were translated correctly. As to the exact modus operandi, there is nothing on record that we know of as coming from the Prophet himself.

The great truth remains that we have the Book of Mormon, written in simple language, and that such imperfections as may be found in it are, as it declares itself, "the mistakes of men," and that these are simply errors of language, of such small importance that the meaning is not obscured, but whoever reads may also understand. It gives a plain and succinct account of the manner in which this continent was peopled in early times, shows the origin of the present tribes of so-called Indians, unfolds the purposes of the Almighty concerning this hemisphere, expounds the principles of the everlasting Gospel, by obedience to which mankind may be saved, and testifies that Jesus of Nazareth was in very deed the Son of the Eternal God and the Redeemer of the world. These great truths are invaluable, and the question concerning the exact manner of the translation of the Book is comparatively of little moment.

SUCCESSFUL COLONIES.

According to the official reports made to the federal government of Mexico, the colonies founded by the Latter-day Saints in Chihuahua are flourishing, and the colonists are on the best of terms with their neighbors, as the Latter-day Saints always are when they are not attacked by persons who hope to gain by their destruction, and destruction.

The following paragraphs on the Mexican colonies are from the San Francisco Call:

The largest of these colonies is Colonia Dublan, which has a population of 999 persons, who own 37,000 acres of land. These colonists have established a large flour mill, and also operate a lumber mill, a tannery and an iron foundry. Most of their land is in a high state of cultivation. The colonists are also extensive fruit growers.

"Next to Colonia Dublan in size is Colonia Juarez, which has 654 inhabitants and owns 50,000 acres of land. These colonists operate a large furniture factory, where all kinds of furniture is manufactured; a shoe factory, a tannery, a flour mill, a cannery and an iron foundry. Several industries of minor importance are also operated there.

"Colonia Diaz has 559 inhabitants, who own 74,149 acres of land. They also operate a flour mill, an iron foundry and other industries. "The smallest of the four colonies is Colonia Pucheco, which has 285 inhabitants, who own 73,530 acres of land. These colonists operate two lumber mills and other industries. "All of these colonies devote much attention to growing wheat and other staple crops. They live quietly and are all on the best of terms with their Mexican neighbors."

BEWARE OF THE MICE.

A contributor to the Medical Record holds that the common house mouse is responsible for many cases of pneumonia. The microbe, he claims, has been found in the mouths of all healthy individuals examined, but the microbes which were found in healthy individuals or in those suffering from pneumonia were not virulent enough to cause such a disease when injected into animals like the rat, which are not very susceptible to them. On the other hand, these microbes acquired a great virulence when they passed through a susceptible animal, like the house mouse. The writer reviews various theories that have been suggested to explain the acquisition of virulence by these organisms, and concludes that it is owing to passage through the bodies of house mice. He has discovered the bacilli in the bodies of mice that have been found dead and believes that the virulent germs from the feces or decomposing bodies of these animals serve as the source of the disease in man. As mice are most common in houses during the months of December, January, February and March, the seasonal distribution of pneumonia is also accounted for by this theory.

CHINA'S ARMY.

The affairs of China are attracting considerable attention. Bishop J. W. Bashford, in a letter from Shanghai that has found its way into print, urges the necessity of the United States modifying its exclusion laws; not because the Chinese object to laws that force their laboring men to stay at home, but because they resent being discriminated against. They point out that the headmen of Borneo are not excluded, while Chinese laborers are. They deem it unjust to place the Chinese below the Malay races. A representative Chinese official is quoted as follows:

"We have not the slightest objection, nor has the Chinese government the slightest objection to the exclusion of Chinese laborers. Indeed, the Chinese government does not want Chinese laborers, brought up in this empire, to go to America, but rather to stay here and pay their taxes for the support of the Chinese government. But we want you to exclude them in some other way than by mentioning us by name."

This sentiment of the Chinese must be respected. It is supposed that the trade of China will increase enormously during the next five or ten years, and it stands to reason that, unless the people are treated with due consideration, the largest part of our share of that trade will go to other countries.

Germany is pursuing a correct course, cultivating the friendship of the Chinese. In Germany they are teaching the Chinese the art of war, and so diligent are the students, and so apt the scholars, that they have planned the formation of a Chinese army, 1,250,000 strong. General Yin Tehang has charge of the work, and he will model this immense fighting machine on the German plan. As a young man he was sent to study the art of war in the school of Moltke and Von Clausewitz. He was brought up as a German officer, spent seven years in the Kaiser's service and returned to China in 1893, just in time to take an active part in his country's struggle against the Japanese a year later.

Associated with him are many Chinese young officers who have studied abroad, and they are aided by Japanese experts. Next spring China will have a carefully drilled army of 400,000 men. They are carefully chosen and each will serve three years as a regular and six years as a reserve. At present the principal weakness of the Chinese forces lies in the rifles with which they are equipped, these being chiefly old-style Mausers and Martinis, but in the course of a few months from now the soldiers of the Celestial empire will be provided with a man with the magazine rifles now on order, and modern field guns and European equipment.

Gen. Yin Tehang is quoted as having said to an interviewer:

"We propose no longer depending for our territorial integrity upon the good graces of foreign powers and their alliances. We can never command respect until we are in a position to enforce it. Neither can there be real friendship between China and foreign nations until we stand with them on a basis of approaching equality—until their estimate of us is governed by our power to repel insults and enforce our rights."

That is the Chinese sentiment. There is, as yet, no intention on the part of the Chinese rulers to commence a policy of aggression. But who can tell what will happen in the future, when ambitious emperors find an immense, well equipped and enthusiastic army at their beck and call? Time alone can tell for what future service these Asiatic hordes are now being trained for war. But under all circumstances, our policy toward China, as toward all the world, should be one of justice and honesty. We cannot afford to forfeit the friendship of the nations across the Pacific.

A man was arrested at the White House the other day for insisting on showing President Roosevelt the model of an iceberg which he declared would enable him to reach the North Pole. He quietly accompanied the policeman to the government hospital for the insane. He should have insisted on showing his invention to a reporter and probably he would have got notoriety and some attention.

In the last twenty-three years the United States has spent over a billion and forty million dollars on its navy. In 1893 the appropriation for the naval establishment was $14,819,976.80. In 1905 it was $115,420,997.75. The year 1894 was the record year for appropriation, it reaching the immense sum of $125,301,975.78. No one can complain that the country has not expended along the lines of naval establishment appropriation.

A NEW JUDICIAL INDUSTRY.

Louisville Courier-Journal.
State Senator Anderson of North Carolina has brought suit for $20,000 against the chairman of the Republican committee, who is also the collector of internal revenue at Asheville, for failure to deliver a federal office in compliance with a written contract. If the bargain, sale and delivery of public offices are to be taken into the country we may well provide the country with a larger increased stock of courts.

CURING SNAKE BITES.

Hartford Times.
The use of potassium permanganate as a remedy for snake bites has been alluded to more than once recently and has now found its way into a circular report from India, based on a record of experiments, printed in the Indian Medical Gazette. In ten out of twelve cases it was successful, and in the two where it failed the remedy was not applied until within several hours after the patient was bitten. The treatment prescribed is merely making an open cut over the bite and rubbing in the permanganate, a ligature having previously been applied above the wound.

CHINA'S FUTURE ARMY.

Cleveland Plain Dealer.
A Berlin letter telling something of the remarkable progress made by the young Chinese army recalls that in the Kaiser's army recalls that young men of the same nationality are now students at West Point and Tokio and are giving an equally good account of themselves. Clearly China will not be wholly without trained leaders for the modern army which is being evolved in that country.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

New Orleans Picayune.
That there is a strong opinion in favor of the abrogation of the Monroe doctrine is not to be questioned, and just how far it is going to influence the present Congress remains to be seen. A new feature which, however, necessarily grows out of President Monroe's manifesto is that if the United States is to guarantee protection to the countries embraced in his purview it must also exercise such power of control as is required to keep them in some sort of order. If they are not subjected to some such restraint those nations will continue, as they are now doing, to practice outrages upon other nations, and thereby incur the penalty of invasion and war.

OUR GROWING PACIFIC TRADE.

Baltimore American.
We seem to have been doing business with China during 1905 in spite of the persistent refusal of the Chinese to touch anything with an American brand on it, to learn that in the ten months ended with October, 1905, exports from this country to China aggregated more than $50,000,000 as against $20,000,000 during the same months of 1904. Those are the comparative totals, however, indicating American export trade to China, given out by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce.
